That Wily Amtorg.
Bones of Long Ago.
Siam's Wise King.
New York's Wet-Dry Puzzle.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

IT WAS SAID that Russia was selling wheat. Russia WAS selling, and wheat prices dropped.

Then, for mysterious reasons, known only to the Bolsheviki mind and the board of trade intellect, Russia began buying, and up went the price of wheat, driving poor bears to despair.

Who in the world taught Bolshevists to "outsmart" our ingenious long and short traders?

THAT RUSSIA should "outsmart" the Farm Board, made up of men unfamiliar with speculation, is not surprising.

But how does "Amtorg" manipulate our wisest ones?

Our high finance said Russia couldn't possibly succeed in business. Could high finance have been mistaken?

IN GREENWICH VILLAGE, 100 years ago, respectable citizens were buried in a quiet graveyard. As they bought their graves, each probably thought, "Here I shall rest in peace until Gabriel comes to get me."

But New York City needs the land and steam shovels are now digging up the graveyard. Bones are mixed, the skull of one young lady, perhaps near the feet of some old man, a gruesome travesty of the Ruth-Boaz incident.

Police "guard the bones," and they will be buried to finish the "dust to dust" process elsewhere.

FORTUNATELY, THOSE dead of 100 years ago are really not injured.

And, anyhow, in the course of time, in a few million million years at most, this earth itself will go back to cosmic dust.

The finest grave is only temporary. We must look elsewhere for comfort.

THE KING OF SIAM, who suffers from a dangerous infection of the eye, would have known just what to do, before civilized science came.

He would have gone to the temple. Priests of the strange Siamese religion would have gone through many motions, calling upon powers invisible, of light and darkness.

Then the king would have died of his infection, probably.

Things have changed. This modern king of Siam says to his priests, "Much obliged, but this is real illness, and I can't afford to depend on imaginary cures."

He is coming to Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore.

NEW YORK'S governorship fight will be an interesting wet-dry performance.

The New York Democracy, like the ocean on which the walrus and the carpenter gazed, is "as wet as wet can be."

It demands repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

And the Republican party, until now the Gibraltar of prohibition, will also nominate a wet, Mr. Tuttle, who says nothing short of repeal will suit him.

SINCERE PROHIBITIONISTS will nominate a dry candidate, determined that citizens shall have an opportunity to vote "for God, country and the Constitution."

If, as is probable, there are enough to defeat the Republican candidate, that will guarantee the election of the wet Democracy. It is a puzzling dilemma, prohibitionists.

And Mr. Calder, former Republican senator from New York State, tells President Hoover that the Republican party "can never hope for success in New York State, until it fights to repeal the Eighteenth amendment and starts all over again."

OTHER LANDS, other views. In Miami, David Weinberg, tailor, interested in Communistic ideas, was kidnaped, tarred, feathered, beaten, wrapped in a white-hooded cloak, thrown out of an automobile.

In Russia, 48 men, including high government officials, accused of NOT sympathizing with Communistic ideals, are taken out and shot dead.

They were accused of stirring up public discontent by interfering with food distribution.

In one spot you are tarred and featherd for talking Communism.

In another spot you are shot because you are not interested in Communism.

Angels that study us must wonder.

THE PARIS newspapers Le Temps and Le Journal Des Debats, most powerful in France, demand that the French government put SAFETY AHEAD OF EVERYTHING ELSE.

Talk about a United States of Europe, and talk of economy are secondary.

The important thing is for France to have an army, navy and especially an air fleet, able to defy the world.

The intelligent Temps says:

"We must guard against unpleasant surprises, by relying on our own power, to insure the country's safety."

ACCUSE CITY EMPLOYE IN AUTO RING

Building Engineer Faces Charge of Fraud Sale as Huey Assails Solicitor

Louis A. Schwartz, 35, of 2142 Webster avenue, assistant engineer of the city bureau of building inspection, was arraigned in Oakland Police Court today, charged with conspiracy and receiving stolen goods, in an alleged auto fraud.

After hearing the testimony Magistrate J. J. O'Connor reserved his decision.

Miss Margaret Casey, a nurse, formerly of Bennett street, Moe and Sam Wolfe, brothers, waived hearing for court on similar charges.

HOEY IN CLASH

The hearing in the Schwartz case was replete with clashes between Inspector James N. Hoey, who acted as prosecutor, and Assistant City Solicitor Benjamin Steinberg, who defended Schwartz.

At one point Hoey shouted:

"A fine city solicitor you are. Your place is on the other side of the fence instead of being over there defending that thief."

Testimony disclosed that Schwartz had purchased a $1,300 automobile for $55 at an auction conducted by Constable Henry Cohen at the Center avenue garage of Moe Wolf, last December.

Schwartz sold the car the following day to Miss Casey, according to testimony. Hoey said Miss Casey and Sam Wolf were later arrested in the car in Schenley Park.

STOLEN CAR SOLD

The automobile, originally owned by Isaac Morshum, of 1745 Fifth avenue, had been stolen last October while parked in Fifth avenue, he testified.

Constable Cohen testified he had been approached by Schwartz and Police Lieut. William Lavery and asked to arrange for a sale of several cars in Wolf's garage, which he consented to do.

At this point Hoey attempted to introduce, through Cohen, testimony which he said would prove that Lieut. Lavery and Schwartz had approached Cohen, asking him to sell cars. This movement was bitterly opposed by Steinberg, and the objection was sustained by Magistrate Connors as was every other objection of the attorney.

Hoey contended the auto, at the time of sale, had been stripped of numbers, and that the auction was a fake, to permit Schwartz to buy a stolen car at a ridiculously low price.

Attorney Steinberg argued that the sale was legal and that Schwartz was within his rights in buying the car.

Schwartz was not called to testify.

RESCUING SHOCK VICTIM

FIREMEN AND FELLOW WORKER LOWERING SHOCK VICTIM

Clyde Misser, Rodman street, as firemen helped to get him down from the big sign on the four-story building at 514 Seventh avenue after he was paralyzed by a 14,000-volt electric shock.

SHOCK VICTIM RESCUED

Temporarily paralyzed by a 14,000-volt 6-ampere electric shock, Clyde Misser, Rodman street, a workman for the General Outdoor Advertising Company, was rescued from a sign upon which he had been working on the roof of the four-story Architects' and Builders' Exhibit, 514 Seventh avenue, early today.

Misser and a fellow worker, W. N. Kennedy, 7840 Susquehanna street, were working on the wires at the back of the huge electric sign. Misser's hand slipped, according to Kennedy, and struck the wire. Hook and ladder truck No. 3 of the fire department answered Kennedy's calls for help and assisted Misser to the ground.

Misser was taken to the Mercy Hospital, where he will be kept for observation, although his condition is not now regarded as serious.

MOTHER KILLS CHILD, SELF

HANNIBAL, O., Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Mrs. Edna Ritchie, 32, formerly of Pittsburgh, Pa., today shot and killed her 7-year-old daughter, Dorothy, and then committed suicide in their apartment in this Monroe County town today.

The mother took the sleeping child from her bed, and carried her downstairs, laid her upon a lounge facing the wall and sent a bullet through her heart. The child apparently was asleep when killed. Mrs. Ritchie shot herself in the heart.

Mrs. Ritchie had been ill for some time. She came here with the child from Pittsburgh about a year ago.

According to friends, Mrs. Ritchie was dismissed from a Pittsburgh hospital shortly before she came here. The child was a beauty prize winner in a contest at Pittsburgh some time ago.

Mrs. Edna Ritchie was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Powell, of 634 Hazelwood avenue, old residents of that section. Her parents said she had been seriously ill for more than a year and only a few months ago underwent a major operation. The mother and a sister of Mrs. Ritchie had planned to visit her in Hannibal tomorrow.

EUROPE TENSE OVER FASCIST WAR TALK

'Super-State' Reports Link Italy, Germany, Austria, Hungary; Soviet on Alert

Spread of Fascism throughout Europe, with rumors of the creation of a super-Fascist state including Italy, Germany, Austria and Hungary, today had created a tense situation involving the overthrow of cabinets, rioting and threats of war. These were among the outstanding developments:

1—The Mussolini government is preparing for war, it was charged by a Belgian Senator at the trial of an Italian youth for the attempted assassination of the Italian crown prince.

2—Anti-German demonstrations flared throughout Czecho-Slovakia.

3—Austria feared a movement to restore the Hapsburg monarchy following the fall of the cabinet yesterday.

4—Talk of new treason charges against Adolph Hitler was heard in Germany as a result of his address yesterday vowing to scrap the Versailles treaty.

Italy Ready for War, Belgian Says at Trial

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Sept. 26—(AP.)—The Belgian Senator Louis de Brouckere, president of the Aviation Commission at Geneva, created a sensation during the trial of the youth Fernando de Rosa, accused of attempted assassination of Prince Humbert of Piedmont, Italian crown prince, when he declared himself convinced that the Mussolini government in Italy was preparing for war on both sides of the Albanian border, as well as along the Alps.

The sensational declaration by the Belgian senator featured the closing testimony for the defense in the case of the youthful Italian for his act of last October.

De Brouckere declared on the witness stand that during an official misson on disarmament he was able, by his personal investigation, to convince himself that the Mussolini government was acting as he stated.

The German Nationalists, De Brouckere added, would not behave as they are doing if they did not feel themselves supported by the Fascists.

NITTI AIDS ACCUSED

Francesco Nitti, former Italian premier and distinguished anti-Fascist, testified earlier today as to his knowledge of de Rosa.

Nitti, who at times was visibly moved by strong emotion, explained that he met de Rosa in Paris, where most Italian political refugee came to see him. He said:

"He impressed me as an honest moderate, loyal and well-educated young man, and when I read the details of his act of last October I was convinced that his intention was

NEW YORK G.O.P. ASKS DRY LAW REPEAL

Party Convention Adopts Plank; Attack Made On Democratic Rule

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 26.—(AP.)—By a vote of 733 to 258 the New York Republican state convention incorporated in its party platform today a plank calling for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

There was no debate on the proposition. Members of the dry minority contented themselves with having their opposition placed on the convention record.

SPECIAL RULE

The roll call on the repeal plank was taken under a special rule, which permitted the convention to adopt unanimously the rest of the platform before taking up the prohibition plank.

After adoption of the platform the convention recessed until late today, when nomination of candidates for state offices was the order of business.

United States Attorney Charles H. Tuttle, of New York, was concede the nomination for governor on the first ballot. Gen. James H. Harbord was slated to make the nominating speech for Mr. Tuttle.

ATTACK DEMOCRATS

In addition to the plank regarding prohibition the platform, as presented to the convention, attacked the Democratic state administration for "inefficiency and waste" and condemned "corruption" in the Democratic-controlled cities of Albany and New York.

To Marry

COUNTESS OF CATHCART

FIND MAN SLAIN, ARREST WIFE

LEECHBURG, Pa., Sept. 26.—Mrs. Jennie Conto was held in jail here today while state police sought to solve the slaying of her estranged husband, Joseph Conto, Leechburg pop manufacturer, found with his head blown off on the Shearer farm, late yesterday.

A warrant for arrest of Constable William Raper, said to be in Gary, Ind., on charges of aiding in kidnaping, has been issued by Justice of the Peace Frank Wray, of Kittanning.

Raper is said to have told police before leaving here for Gary, that he had taken Conto to meet a stranger at First and Market streets, last Tuesday, but that the stranger was not there and he left Conto waiting for him.

Police believe Conto was "taken for a ride" and shot to death at the secluded place where the body was found by E. T. Reigh and his son, Robert, who were hunting groundhogs.

Mrs. Conto, questioned by state police and Chief of Police Martin O'Lear, denied knowledge of the murder. She had entered suit for divorce recently in Armstrong County Courts, but the case had not been heard.

State police reported that it learned that Mrs. Conto had been in Youngstown, O., last week and had returned home Friday. Two troopers, of the Butler barracks, have been in Youngstown for two days seeking trace of gunmen believed to have done the killing.

Robbery as a possible motive was rejected, as examination of Conto's pockets revealed $200 cash and valuable papers.

BOB RETAINS LEAD OVER SWEETSER

Atlantan Retains 4 Up Edge By Holding Jess Even at Start of Second Round

BULLETIN.

MERION CRICKET CLUB, ARDMORE, Pa., Sept. 26.—Bobby Jones, battling to protect a lead of 4 up gained in the morning 18-hole round, was accompanied by a gallery of 5,000 golf enhusiasts when he and Jess Sweetser started the second half of the semi-final round match this afternoon. Jones and Sweetser halved the nineteenth hole, and Jones remained 4 up. Charles Seaver led Gene Homans, 4 up, after 20 holes.

Jones won the twentieth hole, but Sweetser retaliated by winning the twenty-first.

MERION CRICKET CLUB, ARDMORE, Pa., Sept. 26.—(AP.)—After withstanding a great comeback by his rival, Bobby Jones was 4 up over Jess Sweetser, of New York, today after 18 holes of the 36-hole semi-final match in the national amateur golf championship.

Jones finished strongly to regain a commanding lead after Charley Seaver, the 19-year-old Los Angeles youth, in the other semi-final match, swept into a lead of 5 up over Eugene V. Homans, of Englewood, N. J.

Jones won three of the last four holes after the big blond New Yorker had spurted midway through the round and almost wiped out the Georgians' earlier advantage.

SWEETSER RALLIES

The battle of former American amateur champions started like a rout when Jones won four of the first five holes with golf that was two under par and machine-like in its accuracy. Big Jess meanwhile was all over the course, in two traps on one hole and in water hazards on another, but he suddenly braced and gave the gallery of 2,500 spectators a thrill by making a fight of it.

Whether it was the return of his own touch or a drive out of bounds by Jones on the seventh Sweetser rallied superbly to win three out of four holes, cutting

Chicago Gang Vainly Tries To Get Oakie's Money

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Jack Oakie, one of the moving picture people, has completed a personal appearance here and left the city, much to his manager's relief.

Chicago, in the opinion of the manager, Marty Martyn, is just as tough as he thought it was. It seems that during his week here he was harassed by plug uglies and low fellows who spoke in casual tones of murder and mayhem unless Mr. Martyn or Mr. Oakie "centributed" $1,000 to them.

Martyn explained:

"The first two men who came to see Mr. Oakie were very polite. They wanted $1,000 for a benefit of some kind. The next day, however, two rough persons appeared and talked very hostile. This continued until I was very much upset."

He was asked:

"Why didn't you call the police?"

He replied:

"You can't fool me. I know all about Chicago policemen. I read the New York papers."

Molnar and Diva Exchange Blows

BUDAPEST, Sept. 26.—(INS.)—A bit of temperamental action consisting largely of face slapping was inserted unexpectedly into Ferenc Molnar's new operetta "The Fairy," now on rehearsal here, according to a Central European radio report today.

Angered by the constant tardiness of Franziska Gal, prima donna, Molnar administered a sound slap to her face, the radio report stated. The prima donna staged a quick comeback, smashed Molnar's monocle, scratched his face and bit his finger.

Turk, 156, Survivor of Wars, 11 Wives, Felled by Auto

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Zaro Agha, Turk, who claims to be 156 years old, was in a critical condition in his hotel today as the result of injuries suffered when he was hit by an automobile on Broadway.

Agha, his great-great-grandson, Ahmet Mussa, and his manager, Assim Ridvan, were standing on a traffic island at Broadway and Sixty-first street last night, waiting to cross to their hotel, opposite.

A large car swung around the concrete platform with its running board over the walk. The running board hit the aged Turk's legs and knocked him down. As he fell his head struck the edge of the running board.

Agha was taken into the hotel. Doctors found he was suffering from internal injuries and possible fracture of the skull and legs. His condition was held too serious to permit his removal to a hospital.

He came to this country last July and has submitted to examination by scientists interested in longevity. He claims to have had 11 wives and to have fought in numerous wars, including a campaign against Napoleon.

FILM HEADS SCOLD 'IT' GIRL OVER GAMBLING ESCAPADE

CLARA TOLD NOT TO TALK OF AFFAIR

Will Rogers Explains Own Loss; Got Horse Laugh From Family, He Says

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Sept. 26.—As the result of her gambling escapade at Calneva, Nev., Clara Bow, the flaming-haired film actress, today was reported cogitating over a bit of "friendly advice" given her by officials of Paramount-Publix, the company which holds her contract.

Officers of the motion picture company admitted today that they had talked with Miss Bow since news of her $13,900 difficulty became public.

STOPPED PAYMENTS

After "bucking the tiger" at Calneva, it is alleged, the actress stopped payments on checks amounting to $13,900. She explained that she thought she was playing with 50-cent pieces whereas the owners of the resort claim these pieces represented $100 checks.

Although declining to be specific about the sort of advice given to Miss Bow, Henry Herzburn, attorney for the motion picture company, asserted it was about the Calneva episode. He emphatically denied, however, that Miss Bow's contract would be affected by the affair.

Meanwhile, Miss Bow had been forbidden to talk of the affair.

Will Rogers, however, had a few pithy remarks to make about the matter in general. He was at Calneva with other members of his company, at least some of the time when Miss Bow was wooing dame fortune over the gaming tables.

ROGERS' LIMIT $60

Quoth Rogers:

"Say, if I had lost $13,900, they would have had to pour all the water in Lake Tahoe over me to bring me to. I wouldn't even have been able to write a check.

"I was only with Clara and her boy friend, Rex Bell, for a short time. She certainly wasn't reckless when I saw her. When I lose $50 or $60 in a gambling house I back out and tell the house that is my contribution for absorbing the light and heat."

Rogers became rather querulous when he said he "got in a sort of a jam" over the affair. He said:

"My wife and family gave me the horse laugh, and accused me of going to the bow-wows all of a sudden."

Informed that the owners of Calneva were reported to be contemplating reproducing Miss Bow's checks on postcards and selling them for 10 cents each, her attorney, W. I. Gilbert, said if they did so he would advise Clara "to pay postage on every one that is sent out."

Sued, Star Admits Having Pets in Home

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Olga Baclanova, screen actress, testifying in Municipal Court as defendant in a $1,000 damage suit, admitted she had maintained a cat and a dog in a rented house without the owner's permission.

The actress and her husband, Nicholas Soussanin, are accused of damaging the residence furnishings while they were tenants from January, 1928, to July, 1929.

Coolidge Urges Light On Soviet Wheat Deals

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Sept. 26.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

Because we do not approve the aims and objects of the Soviets of Russia is no reason for becoming hysterical. They might cause a temporary flurry by a raid on any of our exchanges, but in their present state they are not likely to smother us in wheat. In order to get foreign wheat in here it takes 42 cents per bushel of real money to pay the duty. It is something of an anomaly that foreign interests can sell on the exchange without paying a duty. But in that kind of operation it is necessary for them to repurchase at a later date. Brokers will therefore demand ample security before executing orders.

Calvin Coolidge

But, while avoiding hysteria, we may as well ascertain facts and face them. The legitimate use of our market machinery is one thing. Using it for the purpose of public injury is something else. If investigation shows that foreign sales are made for the purpose of creating artificial prices in the hope of disorganizing our markets, causing depression and loss, with resulting unemployment and public unrest, both our government and our exchanges should act at once to end such operations. But we need not be unduly alarmed. We shall not be overwhelmed.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

DRYS SPLIT ON HOOVER BOARD

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Prohibition forces were split wide open today on the issue of whether President Hoover's Law Enforcement Commission should recommend repeal or modification of the prohibition system, if the commission finds the facts demand such a report.

Announcement by Judge Kenneth MacKintosh, a member of the commission, that he will demand a frank statement by the commission on prohibition when it meets October 8, drew fire from Senator Morris Sheppard (Dem.), of Texas, who sponsored the Eighteenth Amendment in the Senate. Senator Sheppard said:

"Congress never authorized the commission to express an opinion upon the merits of prohibition."

Meanwhile the Supreme Court was confronted with a new attack on the constitutionality of the national prohibition act as the result of the filing of an appeal by A. Stanley Copeland, of Buffalo, N. Y.

Among his allegations is this:

The Volstead Act, in defining all beverages containing more than one-half of 1 per cent alcohol as intoxicating, is an essential untruth. He says it is proved that 2.75 per cent beer is nonintoxicating.

Church Observes North American Saints' Day

ROME, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—St. Jean De Brebeuf and his seven companions, who are the first North American saints ever proclaimed by the Catholic Church, have their first normal feast-day today. They were Jesuit missionaries who suffered martyrdom at the hands of American Indians in Canada and Northern New York State during the first half of the seventeenth century.

Their virtues of fortitude and abnegation and zeal for their faith will be extolled by preachers all over the world, in every mass said today.

'FIX' PROOF TAG FOR VIOLATORS

A new tag for traffic law violators, said to be "fix" proof, has been issued to traffic patrolmen by Jacob Dorsey, police traffic inspector.

The tag issued in triplicate, one copy going to Traffic Court, with the date of hearing written on the tag by the arresting officer, and the date is entered on the court calendar. Another copy goes to the superintendent of police, and the issuing patrolman keeps the third.

The tagged driver and the complaining officer must appear at the hearing on the date set and the case must be heard immediately. Drivers failing to appear will have informations made against them and a warrant issued for their arrest.

Under the old system of tagging, only two copies were made by traffic officers, one supposedly going to the police superintendent and the other to Traffic Court, with no date for hearings. That formality was left to the Traffic Court judge.

Complaints have been made that thousands of tags issued under the old system never actually reached the traffic magistrate, and in the matter of hearings, many cases have been hanging fire for more than a year.

Crain announced today that he had written to the prosecutor of Youngstown, O., asking him to question under oath, Sally Rita, a dancer, and her parents in connection with the grand jury investigation here of the disappearance on August 6 of Supreme Court Justice Joseph Force Crater.

Miss Ritz was interviewed at her home in Youngstown last night.

Crain said he wanted to verify reports that Miss Ritz attended several dinners early in August at which Justice Crater was present.

HUNT 2 FLIERS IN MISSING AIRPLANE

Crackup Feared as Pilot, Manufacturer Disappear After Mystery Takeoff

CLEVELAND, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Two planes, one from Cleveland and another from the airport at Buffalo, were sent out today to make a thorough search of the south Lake Erie shore line between those two cities for Willard Parker, of Cleveland, a pilot, and William McNulty, of Columbus, a salt manufacturer. McNulty and Parker took off from the Cleveland Airport at 1:30 a. m., Wednesday, with their destination indefinite, and have not been heard from.

W. S. Allen, manager of the Curtiss-Wright Flying Service of Columbus, owners of the Curtiss Robin monoplane in which Parker and McNulty took off, said today he was "thoroughly alarmed." Yesterday and last night he sent numerous telegrams to airports within a radius of six hours' flying time from Cleveland, but none of the ports have heard from the plane.

The craft had enough gasoline to carry it five hours, and the fliers announced they intended to go to Buffalo and then to Mifflinburg, Pa.

Allen believes that Parker, inexperienced as a night flier, had been caught in the early morning mists that enshrouded the Lake Erie shore and had crashed against a cliff along an unfrequented beach.

All planes leaving Bettis Field today were notified to be on the lookout for the missing plane.

BUS HITS TREE, 20 INJURED

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Twenty persons were injured, at least one seriously, in the crash near Hybla Valley, Va., of a Washington-Richmond bus late last night. Some seats of the machine were crushed together as it struck a tree after leaving the road on a curve.

The injured were rushed to Alexandria by ambulances and passing motorists. Most of the passengers were believed to be tourists bound for Southern points. Eyewitnesses said the bus was traveling too fast for the driver to make a sharp curve in the road and bounded head-on into a large tree.

Among those treated at the hospital were Mrs. C. P. Hinkle, of Pittsburgh, Pa., and Kenneth Hartsell, of Kingwood, W. Va.

Motorcycle Patrolman William Glenn, 30, of North Braddock police, was injured seriously about the spine when his cycle was sideswiped in Mill road, North Braddock. He is in the Braddock General Hospital. Harold Herd, of 428 Washington street, Braddock, was the driver of the car which struck Glenn, according to a hospital report.

Mrs. Elizabeth Gloekl, 25, of 200 Flack street, suffered a fractured shoulder when a car driven by her husband, Michael Gloeckl, 27, and that driven by Andrew Beck, 21, of 847 Talbot avenue, Braddock, collided in the Pitcairn-Trafford road, near Pitcairn, according to a police report.

NEW YORK G.O.P. FOR REPEAL

in addition to touching upon numerous state issues.

While dealing with the subject of municipal corruption the party promises adoption of laws "to terminate the tenure of party office or public office of any official, who, called upon to testify regarding public acts, invokes his constitutional privilege and refuses to answer."

BARS SALOON

The repeal declaration came before the platform committee in a resolution by Meier Steinbrink, of Brooklyn, embodying the views of Mr. Tuttle. It calls for repeal with the understanding that the repealer be accompanied by adoption of a substitute amendment, outlawing the saloon, forbidding private traffic in intoxicating beverages for private profit, and guaranteeing federal assistance to prohibition states.

The committee placed the plank in the platform by a vote of 39 to 12.

Opposition to the declaration for repeal came from two sources: Party leaders eager to avoid variance between state and national Republican prohibition planks, and the organized reform groups.

The Anti-Saloon League, the Women's Christian Temperance Union and the New York Civic League agreed to unite in support of an independent dry candidate for governor if the wet plank was adopted.

An open hearing of the platform committee last night on the prohibition declaration was marked frequently by mingled hisses and applause.

Former Senator James W. Wadsworth led off for the advocates of repeal, and Representative Fiorello H. La Guardia, W. Kingsland Macy, of Long Island, and others followed. The dry side was presented by Dr. S. M. Nicholson and Fred J. Victor, of the Anti-Saloon League; Mrs. D. Leigh Colvin, of the W. C. T. U.; Canon William Sheafe Chase, of the New York Civic League, and several more.

GRACE deL. V. NEWLIN

KIN OF ADMIRAL FOUND SUICIDE

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 26.—(INS.)—Ill health caused Miss Grace de Lancey V. Newlin, prominent in Philadelphia and New York society, to take her life, authorities said they were convinced today.

Miss Newlin, 30, who was distantly related to Rear Admiral William C. Sims and a cousin of Catharine Newlin Burt, the writer, disappeared from her home in Bryn Mawr on Tuesday. Her body was found late yesterday in a clump of trees on a farm near Malvern, 16 miles from Philadelphia. A bottle of poison was found near the body.

Authorities learned the girl had been in poor health and had been urged to visit a doctor. A note she had left to her mother at their home in Bryn Mawr said:

"Don't worry. I am all right. I don't need a doctor. That is why I do not want to go to him."

Police were unable to solve the mystery of where Miss Newlin had been since Tuesday. Investigators said she had been dead only a few hours when her body was found.

Stotesbury Granddaughter Adopts Second Baby

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—A blue-eyed five-month-old boy has been adopted by Mrs. John Tyson, granddaughter of Edward T. Stotesbury, head of the Drexel banking firm of Philadelphia and member of the J. P. Morgan Company, of New York.

The infant, taken from an orphanage three months ago, became a brother of little Christopher Gilbert Tyson, who was adopted in the same manner nearly a year ago, and is now about 18 months old.

The newly-adopted baby has been named Sydney Hutchinson Tyson in honor of Mrs. Tyson's father, Sydney Emlen Hutchinson.

Mrs. Tyson is 22 and was married in 1927. She is said to have told friends:

"I've liked babies ever since I was a little girl. I've always made it a habit to visit children's wards in the hospitals, day nurseries homes, playing with them."

It was explained that the second adoption was made to give the first little boy companionship, and came after a search of many months.

Four-Nation Fascist Alliance Takes Form

By OTTO D. TOLISCHUS.

(Copyright, 1930, by International News Service.)

BERLIN, Sept. 26.—A new political and economic constellation of nations, successor to the helmeted, saber-rattling alliances which preserved the old militaristic balance of power in Europe, was foreseen today as gradually emerging from the welter and confusion of European politics.

The spectacular German swing to Fascism, the overthrow of the Austrian cabinet by similar extremist elements and the ponderous but swift-moving orientation of continental political and economic events, have thrown into sharp relief this outline of a new alignment, conceived along radically different theories from the old secret alliances, thrown into the discard along with thrones and monarchies at the end of the World War.

'TRIPLE SPLIT'

Everywhere there is unrest among the masses and a growing tide of nationalism. But while many of these peoples are blindly groping toward some unseen end, in Europe itself a well-defined "triple split" is appearing.

In the East, Bolshevism is trying to maintain itself as a huge Russian empire at the expense of vast present human misery and mass executions.

In the West, democracy is trying to hold its own.

Between the two, there seemingly is arising a cordon of Fascist states. Welded not by military or political alliances but by a striving for a common aim, Italy, Austria, Germany and Hungary are waging an economic battle against Bolshevism and Socialism, and political warfare against western democracies.

SEEK TREATY REVISION

The Fascist "bloc," still in more or less of a chimerical stage, consists of the nations defeated in the World war plus those which feel themselves "cheated of victory." Hardest hit by the economic crisis now gripping the world, they feel their only hope lies in revision of the Versailles treaty and the re-allocation of war costs in a more equitable way.

Bolshevism, seeking every chance to promote world revolution, has lent its support to Fascist aims. Both Moscow and the Communist party in Germany have swung into the ranks of "treaty revisionists."

Hitler Faces Treason Charge in Revolt Threat

BERLIN, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Predicted exclusion of Adolph Hitler's Fascist followers from government offices, consideration of treason charges against him and refusal of the Conservative press to treat his threats of revolution and treaty scrapping at Leipsig yesterday as other than boastful utterances, today characterized the reaction of Germany to its newest political sensation.

At the same time it was made known that the attorney general was inquiring into the possibility of preferring charges of high treason against Hitler for his utterances in the trial of the Fascist officers.

Austria Sees Plot To Restore Hapsburgs

VIENNA, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Fear that an attempt will be made to restore the Hapsburg monarchy were expressed today by various Austrian leaders.

The press bureau of the powerful Farmers' party issued a warning that the fall of Chancellor Johann Schober's government yesterday was maneuvered by Former Chancellor Ignaz Seipel as a preliminary threat in a monarchist plot. Karl Vaugoin, who was vice-chancellor under Schober, also gave cognizance to talk of a legitimist movement when he addressed a large meeting of railway employes last night.

It is known that certain circles in Vienna are constantly in communication with the former Empress Zita, the Hungarian legitimist and the Bavarian monarchists. Ex-Chancellor Seipel has been recalled from Oslo and some observers believe he is destined to resume an important role in Austrian politics.

NYE CHARGES PERJURY

LINCOLN, Neb., Sept. 26.—(AP.)—After trailing the activities of a Ku Klux Klan grand dragon through the recent Nebraska Republican senatorial primary, the Senate Campaign Funds Committee left yesterday to inquire into the North Carolina and Tennessee primaries.

Senator Gerald P. Nye, chairman, said the committee would convene again October 14, but it was undecided as yet which primary would be investigated first.

Before leaving Lincoln for Washington, Senator Nye charged that false testimony had been given the committee in its investigation of the reasons why George W. Norris, a Broken Bow grocer, filed for the Republican nomination as senator in opposition to Senator George W. Norris. Nye said:

"We are done with that kind of business, and there is going to be a demonstration that this committee is not a thing to be played with."

Nye said he believed there were grounds for perjury prosecutions in connection with the Nebraska hearing, but indicated that this matter probably would be left to local authorities.

HOOVERS SPUR PLAGUE WAR

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—The public announcement that President Hoover's son is under treatment for tuberculosis was commended today by health authorities who believe it will result in wider play for science's most effective weapon against the disease—early diagnosis.

Surgeon General Cumming, of the Public Health Service, said although some progress has been made, the attitude of laymen toward frank dealing with the one-time taboo of tuberculosis still seriously impairs the effectiveness of treatment. Dr. Cumming added:

"The example of the President, his family and his physician will have a salutary effect. It will encourage patients to seek plain advice early; it will lead doctors to make diagnoses as soon as possible."

Officials of Three States Dedicate Newly Laid National Highway

By CHARLES A. EARLEY,
Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Pa., Sept. 26.—The new stretch of concrete road on the National Highway between this city and Claysville, Pa., was officially open today after dedicatory exercises and a banquet attended by Democratic and Republican leaders in the George Washington Hotel.

Although many political figures of Pennsylvania and representatives of Gov. William G. Conley, of West Virginia, and Gov. Myers Y. Cooper, of Ohio, were present for the exercises and banquet, the affair had no political significance, the general committee explained.

Although unable to be present for speaking services which were broadcast by Westinghouse radio station KDKA at the banquet, Secretary James J. Davis, of the Department of Labor, was switched in on the program from a studio in the William Penn Hotel.

DAVIS LAUDS PROGRESS

In his talk lauding the opening of that particular stretch of Main Street of America, Davis said:

"The new section of turnpike is an attest to Pennsylvania's forwardness in highway construction problems. We are first of all proud this new proof that Pennsylvania is at the lead and forefront of the country in the development of roads, a means of bringing its population together for social benefit and business profit. The road dedicated was part of the first highway ever constructed by the United States government. It had a political use. It prevented what was seriously feared—the setting up of the West as a separate nation. We owe to that road the fact that East and West are—and ever have been—part of the same great country. I look forward to the time when every family will have a motor car. The isolation of the farm will then disappear."

The main address was delivered by Henry W. Temple, of Washington, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee. He succeeded the late Stephen G. Porter as head of that legislative body. In his talk Temple stressed the historical sifnificance of the highway.

RECORD PROGRAM

Gen. Edward Martin, Republican state chairman, in his brief talk, said the present road and bridge construction program of the state was the largest ever undertaken.

Other speakers who told of the significance of the project included Highway Engineer Eckels, who came as Gov. John S. Fisher's personal representative; John M. Hemphill, Democratic candidate for governor; H. E. Kloss, who was in active charge of the construction work; A. Boyd Hamilton, secretary of the State Senate; Robert N. Waid, Ohio director of Highways, representing Gov. Cooper, and C. P. Fortney, road commission chairman, of West Virginia, representing Gov. Conley. Dr. S. S. Baker, president of Washington and Jefferson College, was toastmaster.

Prior to the banquet a historical parade formed at Claysville, nine miles west of here, passed the reviewing stand erected in front of the Washington County Court House, and treked on to Brownsville.

His body was found by his son-in-law, Peter Dietrick, with whom the aged man lived. Dietrick told police he heard the shot, but thought his father-in-law was shooting rats. Ulrich had been in ill health and despondent, police learned. He was separated from his wife.

RIVAL ASSAILS RUTH HANNA

MT. CARROLL, Ill., Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Lottie Holman O'Neill, independent candidate for the Illinois senatorial seat, began her campaign today with the claim she is the "only real Republican candidate."

Her initial speech, prepared for delivery here this afternoon, charged the Republican ranks were broken over the coming liquor referendum and that Ruth Hanna McCormick, Republican nominee, departed from the party's principles when she agreed to abide by its verdict.

Mrs. O'Neill entered the senatorial fight as an avowed dry, and with the backing of the Illinois Anti-Saloon League. Her candidacy projected a third point for a triangular political contest with James Hamilton Lewis, Democrat, running as an avowed anti-dry, and Mrs. McCormick as willing to accept the will of the people on the question.

FALSE ALARM CAUSES PANIC

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Fire engines responding to a false alarm at Public School 157 in Brooklyn today caused a near panic among 2,500 students and mothers whose children attend the school.

Some person phoned police that there had been an explosion in the school. Emergency squads and fire apparatus were rushed to the scene. About 500 mothers heard or saw the apparatus and dashed wildly about the building clamoring for their offspring. Three fainted. Some were trampled.

There had been no explosion. Deputy Fire Commissioner John A. Lach said the call had evidently been sent in by a man suffering from a mania to see the fire engines run.

'BAERING' DOWN ON THE NEWS WITH ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

Jim Reed, nee senator, brought both knees back from Europe and settled our national affairs in a single speech.

Taking charge of America is only another egg at breakfast for Jim.

First of all, he wants all candidates to tell us how they stand on booze. We don't see how they do it themselves.

He concedes that our post-offices are terrible buildings. To most people they're just pens.

While at sea, Jim heard a sailor singing, "I'm Dancing With Tears in My Eyes Because the Girl on My Arms Is Tattooed."

He played Tom Thumb golf here and likes it so much that he thinks America is due for a wave of miniature prosperity.

Jim says we should boycott that Soviet wheat by converting it into burned toast.

He admits Bobby Jones is a great golfer, but says that America has sympathy for the under dog. That's why we put so much mustard on frankfurters.

Mr. Reed summarized farm relief by saying the administration sewed a very little vest button on a very big overcoat.

And in conclusion, he wants the Eighteenth Amendment repealed so fast it will take a lot of skin with it. Which doesn't conclude anything.

CANNON'S FOES DEFEND STAND

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—In the face of a protest from Bishop James Cannon, Jr., over the manner in which new charges have been filed against him by four ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, two of his accusers last night maintained they had followed "the spirit and the letter" of their church law in bringing the complaints.

Dr. Forrest J. Prettyman, of Baltimore, and the Rev. Costen J. Harrell, of Richmond, Va., expressed belief the bishop would be unsuccessful in having their investigation set aside. Bishop Cannon, now on his way to the United States from Brazil told the Associated Press by radio he would file a protest on the ground he had not been conferred with before the charges were filed.

The four ministers advised him of their action by cable and, they said, his reply constituted acknowledgment of the charges.

The two churchmen, here for a session of the Baltimore conference of the church, refused to divulge their charges.

SLAYER'S HOAX EXPLODED

SAN QUENTIN, Cal., Sept. 26.—(INS.)—Prison officials today were convinced that Gordon Stewart Northcott, awaiting execution for the slaying of small boys, had perpetrated a hoax when he "confessed" that he had killed no less than 16 boys.

Warden James B. Holohan said that he believed Northcott's "confession" was made in an effort to forestall his execution, which is scheduled for next Thursday, or to at least delay it while a search was made for the bodies of his asserted victims.

Maps drawn by Northcott and purporting to show where the bodies were buried were sent to Riverside County authorities, but a subsequent search failed to reveal any bodies at the places designated by Northcott.

Whitney, Bride Honeymoon In Blue Ridge Home

UPPERVILLE, Va., Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Mr. and Mrs. John Hay Whitney arrived late last night for their honeymoon at the old manor house which is the gift of the wealthy New York sportsman to his bride.

and a butler, they left Philadelphia in a special train for Washington last night shortly after their marriage at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Bessie Dobson Altemus Eastman.

The fine old manor house, situated in the foothills of the Blue Ridge Mountains, has been equipped with swimming pools and a gymnasium and the young couple spent some time recently in purchasing antique furniture for it. Enlarged stables, an aviation field and a polo field have been laid out, and the estate offers fine facilities for fox hunting.

After their visit to Virginia, Mr and Mrs Whitney will divide their time, when in America, between their town house at 972 Fifth avenue, New York, and the Whitney Long Island estate, Greentree, Manhasset.

Newest Barrymore, Stage Tradition Heir, in Debut

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Ethel Barrymore Colt has come into her inheritance of eight generations of traditions of the speaking stage handed down through the Lanes, the Drews and the Barrymores.

The 19-year-old daughter of the famous Ethel Barrymore was invested with her birthright in the Hartman Theater here last night during the first dramatization of the Pulitzer prize novel "Scarlet Sister Mary."

Despite the leadership of Miss Barrymore, interest in the debut of her daughter and a capacity audience, the presentation was not artistically successful to many of its judges.

Miss Barrymore's characterization of Sister Mary was generally considered excellent from an optical point of view although frequently she could not be heard.

Her daughter appeared perfectly at ease. Her debut was quite in contrast with that of her mother as "Julia" in "The Rivals," 26 years ago.

REED PRAISES HEARST AS AMERICAN

Ex-Senator From Missouri, In Washington, Pa., Talk Lauds Deeds of Publisher

By CHARLES A. EARLEY,
N.E.A. Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Pa., Sept. 26.—"France has made herself ridiculous on many occasions, but her attitude in expelling William Randolph Hearst from her shores was the most ridiculous I know of."

That was the statement last night of ex-Senator James M. Reed of Missouri, recently returned from a European tour and runner-up for the Democratic nomination for President against Al Smith in 1928. Reed stopped here at the George Washington Hotel over night en route by automobile to his home in Kansas City.

LAUDS HEARST

Discussing the aspects of the Hearst expulsion, Reed said:

"Mr. Hearst performed a notable piece of work for all the American people in his expose of the Anglo-French treaty. France pulled a small piece of business when it expelled him on his recent visit there.

"Hearst, too, did his duty as a newspaper man. He is the advocate of a free press and France, by her action, has made him a hero in the eyes of his people back home.

"The proceedings which accompanied the secret work on the treaty should have been made public. It appears to me that such an attitude as France and Great Britain took in connection with the treaty was deplorable.

"For years I have admired Mr. Hearst's courageous stand on public matters, especially in connection with foreign affairs. If we had more newspapers like his, the country would be much better off.

"Again I reiterate that France did a small piece of business in making itself ridiculous, taking its spite out on Mr. Hearst.

"His statement commenting on the expulsion, was indeed a work of art, and I congratulate him. He has proven to Americans the secret connivings of European nations and I know he will and can do it again when the occasion warrants."

SAYS AT FUTURE

Reed was asked:

"Do you intend running for President again?"

He replied:

"I am now in private life and my only purpose at the present time is to return to my law practice in Kansas City."

His answer to the next query was more to the point.

"What do you think of the present prohibition situation?"

Vigorous and emphatic was his reply:

"I have always been opposed to prohibition. I doubt very much whether any one doubts my attitude on that. The prohibition act has caused more corruption, graft and heartbreaks than any law ever passed. There can be no doubt of that."

SEES EUROPE UPSET

In regard to the European situation, Mr. Reed said:

"Europe is in a very unsettled state. If the European statesmen, or the so-called statesmen, could be muzzled for, say, 12 months, the goddess of peace would feel more at home. France and Italy have assumed a warlike attitude for the past somewhile back. If the leaders there would keep their mouths shut, things would be much better off. There is much unemployment in Germany, France and England, but I think things are going to be better soon. The recent Communist coup in Germany leaves that nation very unsettled. I was in Berlin at election time. The police had a hard time preventing milling Communists from fighting the pacifists who paraded up and down before the Reichstag."

GOES WEST TODAY

The ex-Senator, accompanied by Mr. Reed, will continue his westward trip today. Several state and Washington County Democratic leaders conferred with him for a short time after his arrival. Included among these were John M. Hemphill, Democratic gubernatorial candidate; James S. Bates, Washington, candidate for Congress against Hen. y W. Temple, incumbent, and Judge Henry C. Niles, of York, Democratic candidate for the State Supreme Court.

San Francisco Asks Hearst To Be Guest; Chicago Welcome Oct. 9

Universal Service

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 26.—Because Mr. William Randolph Hearst "has displayed steadfast allegiance to American traditions of free speech and free press and has voiced unswerving opposition to foreign entangling alliances and secret diplomacy," San Francisco's city and county government wants to honor him officially and publicly on his return here in the near future.

To this end the board of supervisors has adopted a resolution requesting Mr. Hearst to be the official guest of the city at a public reception when he reaches San Francisco. It was also suggested that an appropriate date would be October 6, the fifty-fourth anniversary of the founding of the San Francisco Examiner.

Before the resolution was passed various members of the board lauded Mr. Hearst from the floor of the supervisors' chamber. Supervisor Andrew J. Gallagher, who introduced the resolution, paid high tribute to Mr. Hearst for his unceasing efforts toward the adoption of American principles in world affairs.

ADOPT RESOLUTION

Supervisor James B. McSheehy declared that Mr. Hearst and his numerous publications have always advocated the betterment of mankind. McSheehy said that Mr. Hearst has always stood for the rights and dignity of labor, for the people and against selfish special interests.

Supervisor James M. Toner lauded Mr. Hearst as "one of the outstanding citizens of the United States, as were his father and mother before him," and he declared that "San Francisco will be honored to entertain him officially."

POLICIES PRAISED

The resolution read, in part:

"Whereas, Mr. William Randolph Hearst, distinguished American publisher and leader in civic affairs, has displayed steadfast allegiance to American traditions of free speech and free press; voiced unswerving opposition to foreign entangling alliances and secret diplomacy; and has again recently manifested those qualities as a citizen and journalist which have made him an outstanding figure in American public;

"Now, therefore, be it resolved, that the board of supervisors of the City and County of San Francisco in behalf of the people and in recognition of the devotion of San Francisco to the principles of free press and free government, does hereby extend an invitation to Mr. William Randolph Hearst to be the official guest of the city, and that the members of the board join in welcoming him at a public reception."

CHICAGO GUEST OCT. 9

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—William Randolph Hearst will be received formally here on Chicago Day, October 9. The date for his reception was set after the publisher accepted the official invitations extended him by the City Council and the Board of County Commissioners.

His wire to Mayor Thompson read:

"I am deeply honored by the resolutions passed by the City Council of Chicago and the Cook County Board of Commissioners and by your complimentary telegram.

"I accept with much appreciation and pleasure the invitation of yourself and the Council to be the guest of the City of Chicago on Chicago Day, October ninth."

THOMPSON REPLIES

The Mayor replied:

"Your telegram accepting Chicago's invitation to be our guest at a patriotic celebration is received and appreciated. I feel sure that your reception will be one that will be remembered."

Meanwhile, plans were proceeding for the parade. Mr. Hearst, accompanied by several thousand automobiles, will be taken on a trip around the boulevard system. Upon its conclusion he will be escorted to the stadium to receive the plaudits of the 150,000 Mayor Thompson predicts will be there to show their appreciation of the publisher's unflinching fight in behalf of the American people.

WARSHIP ADRIFT IN NORTH SEA

LONDON, Sept. 26.—(INS.)—The British cruiser Conquest consigned to the junkyard under the terms of the London Naval Treaty, broke away from a tug in the North Sea today off Flamborough Head while en route to a shipbreaking yard.

The decommissioned cruiser, with only a skeleton crew of six men aboard, lurched away from her convoy in the grip of a strong tide and was soon lost to sight.

Naval vessels and tugs immediately instituted a search for the drifting cruiser, which constitutes a dangerous menace to shipping. With her dynamos and all other salvagable parts removed before the last journey to the wreckers began, the ship is completely out of control.

U. S. SHIPS FIRE ON REDS

SHANGHAI, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Two American gunboats fought their way through barrages of artillery fire laid down by Chinese Reds at different places along the middle Yangtse river last night and today, silencing the heavy attack and escaping undamaged.

As in previous cases, the American vessels were subjected to fire from shore as they patrolled that section of the river which has been infested with pirates and other marauders for months.

The U. S. S. Gaum fought an artillery duel with a battery of Red field guns hidden along the shore 190 miles above Hankow. The U. S. S. Gahu ran into a battery of Red field guns a few miles above Kiukiang.

WIFE OF '50-50' MATE FREED

Mrs. Jean McLean S. Walker, 47, of 366 Stratford avenue, who refused to be a "50-50" wife, was granted a divorce on the grounds of desertion from Dr. William K. Walker, 62, formerly on the staff of Pittsburgh hospitals, and now of Phoenixville, Pa., by Judge Frank P. Patterson in Common Pleas Court.

They were married November 9, 1926, with an understanding, according to Mrs. Walker, that they would live with her father, who had homes in Pittsburgh, Chautauqua and Florida. Dr. Walker spent much of his time with his sisters in Phoenixville and when she protested he told her it was a 50-50 proposition between them and her, Mrs. Walker testified.

Edison Discovers Libel on Goldenrod

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Sept. 26.—(AP.)—The rod—goldenrod—shall be spared at the behest of Thomas A. Edison. In behalf of hay fever sufferers it had been decided to exterminate it and penalize gardeners who reared it. But the wizard, who is working on schemes to make rubber out of goldenrod, wrote the Chamber of Commerce pointing out that the Gaspe Peninsula in Canada is profuse in goldenrod and shy on hay fever and ragweed. The campaign, therefore, will be against ragweed.

2 Steamers Collide In Gibraltar Bay

GIBRALTAR, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—The British steamer Margarita sent out an SOS this morning, explaining that she had collided during a dense fog with the Spanish steamer Nuestra Senora del Carmen, south of Tarifa Point and was in danger of sinking. The Margarita ultimately was beached in Gibraltar Bay.

The Spanish ship reached Gibraltar in a damaged condition.

Urge Wives to Keep Soldiers From War

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—The wives of Mexico's soldiers are being besought to prevent their husbands from making war. The government has discovered a considerable number of Communist pamphlets and leaflets urging the women folk of Mexican soldiers to adopt every means of averting a war of the future when the military will be pitted against the peasantry.

Tilden Says Jones Is Good Will Envoy

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Ambassador extraordinary is Mr. R. T. Jones, Jr., Mr. William T. Tilden, speechmaking at the Penn Athletic Club, lauded Bobby for popularizing America abroad by his sportsmanship and modesty. He added: "If America realized how much Bobby Jones has done for us abroad he would be even more of an idol than he is."

Wins Place for Governor, Senate

CONCORD, N. H., Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Completion of the recount of votes cast in the recent primary today definitely gave Albert Wellington Noone, 64-year-old Peterboro manufacturer, the Democratic gubernatorial nomination over Frederick E. Small, of Rochester, and thus created a political situation unparalleled in this state. He is also his party's United States senatorial nominee.

Former Grid Star Dies in Knife Fray

BRIDGEPORT, O., Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Joseph Warren, 27, Negro, former halfback on the Bridgeport High School football team was stabbed to death last night by another Negro. Police arrested Joseph Wier, 27, said to be Warren's cousin, at a physician's office in Kirkwood, a suburb, where he applied for treatment for a lacerated scalp.

HARRISBURG, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Licenses to sell insurance in Pennsylvania were granted by the State Insurance Department to 617 agents and 34 brokers, who passed examinations taken September 6.

League Court Poll Tactics Like U. S. Ward Election

GENEVA, Sept. 26.—(Universal.)—The League of Nations has selected its legal department—the League's Permanent Court of International Justice.

What was called an election turned out to be largely a meeting to ratify the slate of judges privately agreed upon among the leaders.

The first judge named was former Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg, co-author with B. Briand of the pact to outlaw war. The only contest in the voting of the council and assembly for the 15 judgeships was over the selection of the fifteenth. European nations fought vainly to keep this place away from Latin-America.

The horse-trading and log-rolling tactics which marked this contest were reminiscent of a ward election in the United States. The final result, however, left Europe dominant in the Court with nine judges, while Latin-America has three, Asia two and the United States one.

The complete list of justices is:

Frank B. Kellogg, United States; Antonio Sanchez De Bustamente, Cuba; Augusto Guerrera, Salvador; Count Adatchi, Japan; Rafaele Altimira, Spain; Dionsio Anzilotti, Italy; William Van Evsinga, Netherlands; Henri Fromageot, France.

Sir Cecil Hurst, Britain; Demetri Negulesco, Rumania; Baron Rokin Jacquemins, Belgium; Count M. Rostworowski, Poland; Walter Schucking, Germany; Wang Chung Hui, China; Francisco Jose Urrutia, Colombia.

TRY TO BOOST REGISTRATION

County Commissioner Joseph A. Armstrong, Republican county chairman, has forwarded to Gifford Pinchot, gubernatorial nominee, a letter explaining the efforts that have been put forth to stimulate the registration of voters in Allegheny County, Armstrong stated.

"The County Commissioners have been doing everything within their power both through the public press and through the board of registration commissioners to bring the registration of our county up to what it should be."

Armstrong declared in the letter that the county commissioners observed the light enrollment on the first registration day, September 5, and at a meeting the following day appropriated $7,500 in addition to the regular annual appropriation for the registration commission for the purpose of enlightening the people and getting them to register.

Armstrong explained that as Republican county chairman he would issue through the newspapers, prior to the next registration day, October 4, a statement addressed to the Republican committees of Pittsburgh, McKeesport, Clairton and Duquesne, urging them to impress upon voters the necessity of registering and voting.

Armstrong's letter was a reply to one he received from Pinchot noting the light registration and asking that efforts be made to increase it.

CHARGES FRAUD IN MORTGAGE

Attorney Winfield S. Walsh, who recently pleaded guilty to embezzlement of $54,000 from two Dormont building and loan associations, and Mrs. Marie Orr, today were named defendants in an equity suit filed by Harry Thomas, 2642 Louisiana avenue, Dormont.

Thomas avers that Walsh last December 6 fraudulently obtained his signature to a $3,000 mortgage on a two-story brick and stucco house in Curran avenue, Twentieth Ward. The mortgage was made out to Mrs. Orr, for whom Walsh is described as having loaned money on real estate.

Thomas alleges he signed the mortgage unknowingly and never received any money as a result of the purported agreement. He asks that the defendant be restrained from foreclosing the mortgage and that it be declared void.

Walsh is scheduled for sentence next Friday on the embezzlement charges. He was counsel for the loan companies.

ASK BLUE LAW BAN IN ARNOLD

ARNOLD, Pa., Sept. 26. The fight against Sunday football in Arnold reached the borough council last night when a committee of ministers demanded that the Blue Laws be rigidly enforced.

The ministers attended at the invitation of Burgess John W. Hunger. The discussion of Sunday sports followed the arrest of players and officials of the Arnold Independent football team for playing a game last Sunday.

The Rev. Samuel S. Ford asked that all amusements and work in the borough be prohibited on Sunday. Joseph Bonidy, solicitor, told Council enforcing the Blue Laws was up to the burgess and police, and if rigidly observed would close everything but the prescription departments of drug stores.

A resolution asking for the suspension of Police Chief Fred Mathews was tabled. Bart Dattola, councilman, said the town had a number of liquor joints and that Mathews had not suppressed them.

SLAYER GIVEN 1 TO 4 YEARS

Thomas F. Molyneaux, 26, of 1324 James street, convicted last spring of voluntary manslaughter in the death of John H. Ryan, 75, of 418 Tripoli street, was sentenced to serve from one to four years in the workhouse by Visiting Judge Miles I. Potter, in Criminal Court, today.

Ryan was found unconscious in Sandusky street last January 17 and died two days later in the Allegheny General Hospital. Molyneaux reported to police he had slugged two men who had tried to hold him up near the place where Ryan was found. Police discredited his story and charged him with beating Ryan.

LOOT IN STORE HOLDUP $250

Three young men, all armed with revolvers, held up Felix Nazaylo, grocer, of 2424 Jane street, soon after he opened the store this morning, rifled the cash register of $250 and escaped in an automobile, police were informed.

Nazaylo said he turned to get cigarets for his supposed customers and when he faced them again each was leveling a gun at his head.

Motorists Warned Of Bogus Test Tags

Motorists of the Pittsburgh district are warned by the Pittsburgh Motor Club to beware of "bootleg" stickers during the annual inspection of all motor vehicles in Pennsylvania. Last year the legal department of the club received reports that duplicate windshield stickers were obtained by garages which did not have the Bureau of Motor Vehicles franchise to examine and approve cars.

These stickers were illegally given to cars tested. In most cases the owners of cars were unaware of the deception.

HURT IN AUTO, SUES ESTATE

Joseph Goodnick, 20, claiming serious injuries in an automobile accident, filed suit through his parents, Samuel and Sofie Goodnick, of Patton Township, in Common Pleas Court, asking $50,000 damages from the estate of John Vesely, of Patton Township, killed in the accident.

The suit declared Goodnick was a passenger in an automobile operated by Vesely, and asserted the latter's reckless driving caused the car to run off Hulton road, near the Plum Creek crossing, December 8, 1928, and collide with a pole. Goodnick suffered a fractured skull and internal injuries and was unconscious for seven weeks, according to the suit.

Reduce the Acid

In sick stomachs—instantly

Sick stomachs, sour stomachs and indigestion usually mean excess acid. The stomach nerves are over-stimulated. Too much acid makes the stomach and intestines sour.

Alkali kills acid instantly. The best form is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia, because one harmless, tasteless dose neutralizes many times its volume in acid. Since its invention, 50 years ago, it has remained the standard with physicians everywhere.

Take a spoonful in water and your unhappy condition will probably end in five minutes. Then you will always know what to do. Crude and harmful methods will never appeal to you. Go prove this for your own sake. It may save a great many disagreeable hours.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. 25c and 50c a bottle—any drug store.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Company and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

Who Said "Business Isn't Good!"

We're Not Complaining... Business is Booming Here!

IT looks as if 1930 is going to be a banner year here! When you stop to think of it, why shouldn't it be? We're doing things no other store is doing... giving unequalled values and offering credit that is simply astounding.

Some people may think that, being a so-called "credit store" we can't compete, on a price and value basis, with other large institutions. They're dead wrong! We'll match price with price, and value with value, at any time! Our customers know that! They are well aware of our positive price guarantee:—

If you can buy equal quality merchandise for less in any other store, we'll refund your money

THERE'S not another store in the land as liberal in credit dealings as this! We have the experience—23 years of it—and the resources that enable us to do things no other store would even attempt! We don't ask you to pay cash! We don't even expect you to pay us in 30 days, or 60 days or 90 days! Just pay us a little at a time, as it's convenient! We'll give you all the time that you need—and there's no interest, no extras, no fees of any sort! You buy at cash prices, but you pay in small amounts, gradually!

We'll make easier terms—with a longer time to pay—than any other store in Pittsburgh

We Now Present

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor.

Vincent Lopez goes Spanish tonight in an attempt to entertain the King of Spain via radio. He has prepared a concert full of exotic color for Latins everywhere and particularly the man on the throne in lower Europe. Numbers are to be announced in Spanish and English. The broadcast is to emanate from KDKA and W8XK at 10:30. The transmitting aerial at Saxonburg will be used. Eddie Cantor appears as guest of The Radio Follies on WJAS at 10 o'clock. The program is made possible in Pittsburgh by the Kappel Jewelry Company.

Admiral Byrd is to greet the KDKA staff in the William Penn studios next Wednesday night when he speaks here.

The Duquesne University-Slippery Rock football game at Forbes Field is a KQV feature at 8:45.

QUESTION DAY:

A. R., Bloomfield—Who plays the Swede in Tasty Yeast Jesters over KDKA?

Answer — Wamp Carleson, who's doing his first network program.

Jerry Bell, "Downtown"—Why are the chimes necessary in network programs?

Answer — Jesse Kaufman at WCAE tells us that they are the only fool-proof cue yet discovered for advising announcers of network stations that there will be a break in the network program to allow them to give the station call letters. Verbal cues leave too much chance for misinterpretation.

Harry Carr, Connellsville—Who is the Love Story Girl in Collier's Hour?

Answer—Lucille Wall.

WEATHER MAP

Dear Mr. Martin:

It is hard to suggest a way to improve Sun-Telegraph radio news and programs as "We Now Present" and the schedule of what's on the air are the best I have seen.

However, I wonder if it would be possible for you to furnish a radio weather map this winter giving conditions in different parts of the country for DX listeners?

I believe people would rely on it the way they do on your "Ten Best Bets" which rarely go wrong.

Mrs. Ora Biddle
210 Lenawee avenue,
Monessen, Pa.

We appreciate your suggestion, Mrs. Biddle, and as soon as the Radio Show is over we shall talk the matter over with Mr. Brotzman, the weather forecaster in Pittsburgh. Thanks for your nice comment.

MORE LOCAL PROGRAMS

Radio Editor:

It seems to me the programs originating in local studios are getting better right along and some are on a par with network productions. I would suggest more of them.

As for improving Sun-Tele radio news and programs I would say give more space to "We Now Present"—I read every word published from Sunday to Sunday.

I would like to see WTAM and WLW listed more frequently in Outside Stations.

Yours truly,
Mrs. Paul Perkins,
188 Pleasant street,
Rochester, Pa.

Endorsed By Half A Million Women

For over fifty years, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped young girls who were just entering womanhood. It has helped mothers to regain their strength after childbirth and to care for their families. It has given rundown women more energy to do their work. It has proved a blessing to women of middle age.

MRS. O. S. LAMBERSON
Plummer, Idaho

"I am twenty-two years old. I have been more or less nervous all my life and have had to work hard the last few years. When I married three months ago, I couldn't even sweep the floor without sitting down. My husband suggested Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Now I can go ahead with my work and not get tired. I do not feel rundown any more and I have gained ten pounds. I should be very glad to answer letters about this medicine for it is a wonderful help to young women as well as old."—Mrs. O. S. Lamberson.

MRS. M. W. SMITH
1617 East Main Street, New Albany, Indiana

"The doctor gave me every kind of medicine for nerves, rundown condition and irregularities. I took treatments but to no success. I am a bookkeeper and a friend of mine where I work told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because it did her so much good. I took three bottles and felt like a different person. It has given me pep and appetite. I think it is a wonderful medicine and I am glad to help you advertise it. If any woman writes, I will do my best to answer her."—Mrs. M. W. Smith.

MRS. ANNA M. BENNETT
Harwood, Missouri

"I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound enough. I don't know what I would have done without it after an operation. I was so nervous, weak and dizzy headed and I could not sleep at night. I read in your booklet how the Vegetable Compound helped Mrs. Nowland after an operation so I wrote to her. That is how I came to take it. Now I am healthy and strong as you can see by the picture. My nerves are steady and I am hungry all the time. I do all my housework and take care of chickens on a farm. Your Compound is a wonderful health builder."—Mrs. Anna M. Bennett.

MRS. CARRIE E. POUSE
70 Love Street, Wisconsin Rapids, Wisconsin

"I was weak, tired, had no appetite, was also nervous, had cramps in my stomach, and swollen ankles. Although I am 67 years old, I thought it certainly would not hurt me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has helped me enormously. I first read about the medicine in the Wisconsin Rapids Daily Tribune. It has relieved the pains and increased my appetite. I am feeling fine these days. My husband got me the fifth bottle last week. He says, 'As long as it is helping you, keep on taking it.' I will be glad to write to any woman."—Mrs. Carrie E. Pouse.

TAD JONES GIVES GRIDIRON PROSPECT

The Loudspeaker

Jazz Still Popular.
They Dance and Cry.
Leaders Are Clubby.
Stage Bans Mike.

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—The jazz maestros appear to be more and more the rage with the bright young people. They now occupy the choicest pedestals of popularity, comparable to the positions once held by athletes and movie heroes.

Louis Reid

To have not only a bowing acquaintance but an opportunity of stopping short as they pass the orchestra to exchange greetings with the Jehovahs of jazz themselves, now constitutes for the bright young people the newest of social distinctions.

The other night Guy Lombardo opened a new season at the Roosevelt. It was a spectacle worth the attention of a modern Thackeray. Not only were the bright young people present to pay personal tribute to Lombard, but your correspondent actually witnessed at first hand the concentrated realism of dancing with tears in the eyes. He learned that the phrase is not merely a song-writer's fillip to his synthetic emotion, but a philosophy which seemingly guides the conduct of a vast number of persons between midnight and 3 a. m.

They Actually Dance With Tears in Their Eyes

He actually saw a staggering—well, imposing, if you prefer—number of the brightest young people whose eyes glistened as they strolled about the dance floor to the languorous moanings of Lombardo's saxophenes. And we mean "strolled."

It has suddenly become a quaint American custom with the more sentimental hoofers, once the band begins to play, to walk slowly to the beat of the music, their arms around each other's waists, their eyes misty, their manner blissfully indifferent to the old-fashioned couples who would hot-step it about the floor.

The clubby spirit of the jazz gods is no less a wonder to behold. They may have stilettos up their sleeves for one another, but their handclasps have the ringing sincerity of brother Elks, their smiles the staunch benevolence of bootleggers. They appear banded fraternally in one great cause—of setting America in motion, of keeping faith with St. Vitus.

And we know that the faith is being kept, that no clouds of war hover over their rose-tinted platforms, for among the friendliest, the most eagerly enthusiastic of Lombardo's patrons were Rudy Vallee, Will Osborne and Bert Lown.

No Microphones Yet On New York Stage

Microphones have yet to be installed on the stage of New York's stage productions even as a means of providing a sample of what listeners might expect were they to rise from their cushions and storm the box office.

According to the statisticians of Broadway 87 per cent of the productions last season were failures. No amount of broadcasting would have done them harm. Broadcasting might have prolonged their life.

The scenes and action of musical shows are, of course, too extensive to be captured by the microphones, but the dialogue of dramas, particularly that part of it concerned with the ageless question of who killed cock robin, if transferred to the air, might create new interest in the theater.

Heywood Broun is adopting the practice of the bigger and better politicians. Not only does he broadcast regularly and often but he even has a campaign song—"Sing a Song for Broun." I hope for his sake it has a snappy rhythm . . . The place for announcers' wives is no longer the home. Mrs. Graham McNamee is soon to face a microphone . . . At any event, Sir Thomas Lipton is taking back a radio set . . . Colleges are instituting courses in the business of broadcasting. Courses in crooning would bring them a greater enrollment . . . Radio is Roxy's meal ticket. During his years on the air he claims to have received more than 500,000 letters inviting him to Sunday dinner.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Anton Kasper, a small shopkeeper, is murdered while on a petting party. A mysterious person signing himself 3-Z writes to the newspapers admitting the crime. In telling of a second murder Mae Ryerson, Kasper's companion, sticks steadfastly to her story of a man with fish-eyes. Philip Armour is found murdered in a car near the scene of Kasper's death. The scene is a dead-end street. On one side is a farm house, on the other a second short street with three cottages and beyond that the Kings Asylum for the Insane. The girl companion of Armour is found by the police and arrested. Belle Walsh, the girl, tells a story identical to that of Mae Ryerson. The police start an investigation at Kings Asylum. The chief clerk suggests a round with both girls present. Proof Esper a paranoid case escaped six months previous. A third murder is circumvented by the police. Floyd Esper is found and arrested. Faced by the two girls he states positively he is not 3-Z. Esper is returned to Kings Asylum. Dale explodes the mysterious papers. Hoax. As yet not a single definite motive is discovered.

Now Go On With the Story.

CHAPTER V

"It's a fairly clear picture we have of Mr. 3-Z prowling 'round all the cabalistic bosh, but where is the motive for killing two men obviously strangers to him and to each other?

Find that, Capt. Blake and the whole case will be a cut-and-dried affair. Tomorrow morning you're going through with that roll call at Kings Asylum?"

Capt. Blake nodded. Dale shook his head dubiously.

"I don't believe it will bring any results. I don't think an insane man wrote those letters. Your handwriting experts say they are all written by the same man, also that the writing is very apparently disguised. I don't think an insane person would be as careful about details as 3-Z has been. And yet there's an insane something behind it all.

"Another thing you can be sure of, captain, your murderer is in the neighborhood of the crimes and yet he doesn't. That may sound rather silly, but I mean that he must live there or he wouldn't know all the details of the locality. He wouldn't have heard that airplane the night of the 18th, which he quickly grasped on to, saying he was in it. Of course he wasn't. Then he doesn't live in the vicinity or he would fear recognition when he goes on the streets. Rather a paradox, but it should give some food for thought."

The following morning while Mae Ryersen and Belle Walsh were present at a roll call at Kings Asylum, Robin Dale slipped into the tiny office of William Ostermann. Ostermann was awaiting the reporter and they were quickly on their way through the spacious corridors which were lined with the rooms of the inmates.

The two made a hurried examination of the little rooms, and, while many queer things were brought to light during this search, nothing pertaining to the petter murderer came to the surface. It was a long laborious task and it was well into the afternoon before they had completed it.

The roll call of over 500 inmates also took a considerable space of time. At lunchtime it was suspended and taken up again at 1 o'clock.

Dale had not gone to luncheon with Capt. Blake and his party. Ostermann, who had taken a great fancy to the reporter, invited him to his own quarters, which were in a small dwelling near the main buildings of the institution. Besides Ostermann, a number of the wardens lived in the smaller house.

Ostermann had a spacious room on the ground floor. It was immaculately clean and strangely enough, quite homelike. It rather surprised Dale, and he spoke of it.

"Well, we get little enough in a place like that, so where we eat an' sleep should be like a home, no?"

"Rather a trying life here, isn't it?"

"Sometimes when you hear them yelling you feel like you go crazy, too. I have sometimes to go out on the grounds and walk around in the flower gardens, or on the farm we have that the ones not so crazy work on."

Luncheon was brought in by one of the helpers from the kitchen. The food was most satisfactory both as to quality and quantity. They chatted as they ate. Dale his mind always turning to that groove, knew there were many interesting odd, grotesque stories in this little fellow with such a strange calling. He managed to get two of three incidents during the meal which would fit somewhere into the stories he wrote for the magazine.

"Don't get much recreation here, do you, Ostermann?" he said toward the end of the repast.

"Oh the work isn't so hard that ain't it . . . we get two an' three afternoons a week off. It's the people around you all the time. Some nights one of them has a spell and yells all night. That usually starts other ones—and then you feel like blowing up the whole place. But it ain't always like that. Otherwise you couldn't stand it."

As Dale had expected the roll-call passed without result. There was not a single inmate of the asylum that either of the girls could point to as the criminal. It was late in the afternoon when they finished. Some time previously Dale had joined Capt. Blake after he and Ostermann finished their own unsuccessful quest and the chief clerk had gone back to his duties.

Dale had an excellent opportunity to watch the two girls as one by one the inmates were brought past them. Miss Ryerson was still by far the more nervous and agitated. She seemed at all times to be on the verge of hysterics. This was probably due to the additional hardships she had gone through during almost a week of incarceration.

It seemed strange, nevertheless, that she should still be in such a highly nervous state now that her status of innocence had been fairly established.

The task was practically completed when an officer entered and spoke in a low tone to Capt. Blake. The message appeared to be of great importance judging from the expression on Blake's face. When the officer had gone he beckoned Dale.

"I've had a man on those houses on Carroll road. He just came in to report that shortly after Mrs. Innes' husband left as usual to go to work another man entered the house."

"Probably Dr. Leo Hammel."

"I imagine—haven't had any luck getting hold of him, so I think we'll drop in on Mrs. Innes as soon as we finish here."

The two young ladies were sent back to their homes in the police car while Blake and Dale walked in the direction of Carroll road, less than a quarter of a mile distant.

As they anticipated, Dr. Leo Hammel was at the Innes house. It took quite a bit of questioning before they arrived at a point which proved to be an entirely new and novel twist to the 3-Z case. It appeared to prove conclusively that Mrs. Innes was the woman referred to in the early letter written by the mysterious 3-Z. Her silence in the matter had, of course, been a matter of self-protection. She had been on an illicit "excursion" and was therefore in no position to speak.

Dr. Hammel, being in the same position, had been forced to remain silent. Under the questioning of Capt. Blake and Robin Dale the truth came to the surface.

Three days prior to the killing of Anton Kasper these two, Dr. Hammel and Mrs. Innes, were seated in one of the petting spots. A man (similar in description to the petter-killer) had come to the car and demanded papers of Dr. Hammel. While stalling in his explanations that he had no papers the doctor started the car and drove away suddenly, thereby probably saving his own life and a third crime.

Further than that they could tell nothing. But it was another link in the chain of clues. Still another, a surprising one, was awaiting Robin Dale when he returned to the Daily Journal office.

To Be Continued.

SQUIRE FIGHTS AUDIT REPORT

Counsel for the Mt. Lebanon Township Commissioners today filed a petition in Quarter Sessions Court, asking that the petition of Justice of the Peace Ira H. Edmundson, of Mt. Lebanon, demanding that they show cause why a statement in their audit of his books should not be stricken out, be dismissed.

Judge George V. Moore set hearing of arguments on the case for the next argument list.

Edmundson, in his petition, charged that auditors of the township, by announcement of a supposed shortage in his books, perpetrated a malicious scheme to injure his political standing. He contends the auditors have no power to check his books, because he does not hold a township office.

VETS TO PLAN ARMISTICE DAY

Today, the twelfth anniversary of the opening of the Meuse-Argonne offensive in the world war, will mark the start of plans for the Armistice Day celebration, November 11, by local war veterans.

A meeting of the Federation of War Veterans' Societies of Allegheny County will be held at 6:30 o'clock tonight, in Hotel Henry, to arrange for Pittsburgh's celebration. Nine American divisions attacking between the Argonne forest and the Meuse river opened America's final battle in the world war, a battle in which Pittsburgh troops had a part and which ended with the armistice.

Officers of the association and committees will be named tonight. Samuel D. Foster is president of the federation.

Germans Contest Explosion Claims

THE HAGUE, Sept. 26.—(INS.)—Lengthy testimony by German defense counsels in the Black Tom and Kingsland $40,000,000 damage claims before the German-American Mixed Claims Commission today postponed rebuttal hearings until Monday.

Dr. Karl von Lewinski, chief German defense counsel, centered his defense on Kingsland explosion claims today, against which he already has entered a general denial of German responsibility.

Hole Dug for Still Caves, Killing Man

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—John Roche, 24, was smothered to death today by a cave-in of an excavation under a house, where he was helping install a boiler for a still, police said.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Sewickley Horticulture Society and Garden Club Hold Show

The Guild Hall in Sewickley was thronged with smartly-clad, interested spectators yesterday afternoon when the Sewickley Horticulture Society and Garden Club gave its annual flower show, continuing today and tomorrow.

Particularly distinctive was the arrangement of giant dahlias and gay gladioli. A miniature garden with a vine-covered white picket fence had a diminutive fountain with a tiny goldfish pool and a border of purple asters. At the upper end of the hall was a rustic garden fence with iron benches placed here and there and huge urns filled with brilliant-hued dahlias, cat-o-nine tails and wild asters. On the stage were card tables holding tea sets and flowers.

Smart Gowns

Among the people there I noticed Miss Rebecca Chislett wearing blue crepe with a black hat and with her were Mrs. Daniel Nevin and Mrs. Frederick B. Hufnagel. Mrs. Nevin wore blue flowered crepe with a hat of blue baku and Mrs. Hufnagel wore a charming ensemble of shell pink bouclet with a hat of rose-beige felt.

Mrs. John W. Lawrence was there, too, wearing chiffon in black and white print with touches of crimson embroidery and with it she wore a hat of sand leghorn with a wreath of flowers. Miss Dorothy Slack wore pink linen with a hat of white felt. Mrs. C. A. Painter, Jr. wore blue crepe with a matching felt hat and Mrs. Maitland Alexander looked charming in a turquoise blue crepe ensemble with a matching hat.

Mrs. John Stewart wore brown wool crepe with a matching hat, and Mrs. Robert Standish a black and white knitted frock with a white hat.

Very attractive was Mrs. Moses Atwood, wearing a white bouclet ensemble with a black straw hat banded in white. With her was Mrs. F. H. Atwood wearing peach crepe with a blue coat and a blue baku hat.

Small Lowry Watts wearing a summer frock of blue and white dimity, was there with her aunt, Madeline McClintock, who wore beige crepe with a matching felt hat.

Children Attend

Mrs. Carroll P. Davis wore beige crepe with a green belt and a hat of the same green. Mrs. Alexander Laughlin, Jr., wore white crepe with a blue hat. And I caught a glimpse of Mrs. Samuel Cooper.

Entering the hall later in the afternoon were Mrs. Frank McCready, wearing a garnet red bouclet, with a matching hat. Mrs. William Booth, wearing brown crepe with a felt hat, and Mrs. Edward Wallace Woods, yellow crepe with yellow leghorn hat.

Mrs. Oliver Smith wore crepe with a tiny pattern of autumn leaves with an eggshell straw hat, and with her was Mrs. Philip Chess, attired in rust bouclet with a leghorn hat.

Mrs. Roy Hunt was there, and Mrs. F. F. Brooks and Mrs. William Watson Smith. Mrs. Smith wore green crepe with a white hat, and Mrs. John B. Semple, blue crepe with a darker blue hat. Mrs. William Christopher Robinson chose an aquamarine crepe ensemble with a matching hat.

Sponsoring art is just one of the many interests of one of the most interestingly active organizations in town, the Junior League. Yesterday the league held a private view of the works of Rodin in the club rooms in the Clark Building, and beginning today and continuing through October 7, the exhibit is open to the public.

League Exhibit

Among the first to arrive for the private view were Helen Leavy, president of the league, and Mary Rhodes, chairman of the exhibits. By the way, there are going to be exhibits of artists' works throughout the winter.

Mary looked distinctive in a navy blue crepe dress with a large pale blue leaf motif, and a smart navy blue fabric hat. The president wore a tailored hydrangea blue crepe dress, made with short sleeves and an interesting double-breasted effect, trimmed with rows of white pearl buttons.

Mrs. W. W. Blair wore a blue crepe dress. Other members interested in the exhibit were Mrs. Alexander L. Robinson, assistant chairman of the exhibit, Nancy Brown, Mrs. Francis de Lacey Hyde, Mrs. J. Henry O'Neill and Marjorie Kimball.

Marjorie chose an intriguing brown wool crepe frock with a belt of beige galyak and a brown felt hat, and Mrs. Gale Landon a grey tweed suit with which she wore a blue felt hat banded in Alice blue velvet. Mrs. C. C. Bailey appeared in black, Elinor Munroe in beige wool with a darker beige hat, Mrs. Hartley Walker in blue printed silk with a blue felt hat, and Mrs. Sherman Park in a rust bouclet dress embroidered in beige.

Many Attend

Others I noticed were Harriet Ramsburg in black wool crepe with white organdie giving the popular lingerie touch, Mrs. Gilbert Rafferty in admiral blue crepe and a blue hat, Priscilla Hall in Pirate blue crepe with a matching hat of felt, and Evelyn Evans in cardinal wool lace and a black felt hat. Mrs. George A. Kelly chose an interesting gown of black crepe having a cowl neckline of shell pink crepe.

There is nothing more exciting than news of entertainments for a bride-to-be except the wedding itself. Several parties I know of are being given in honor of Margaret Hagan, whose marriage to Theodore Gregg Brown of Chicago is taking place next Wednesday at 6 o'clock in the evening in the home of her mother, Mrs. William C. Hagan, of Aylesboro avenue.

Many Fetes

Today Mrs. Edwin F. Scheetz is honoring the bride-elect with a bridge luncheon in the University Club and tomorrow evening Margaret will be entertained with a dinner dance by Mrs. Frances Charters McClure.

A buffet supper will be given Sunday evening by the John F. McGhees, of Crafton, and on Monday another bridge luncheon will be given by Mrs. C. G. Anderson, of Park Mansions.

The bachelor dinner will be given by John F. McGhee and Wallace Guthrie in the Chartiers Heights Country Club. Tuesday the entire bridal party will be given a luncheon by Mrs. Allan C. Davis and that same evening the rehearsal dinner in the Edgewood Country Club will be given by Dorothy Keller.

On September 17 Mrs. Roland Miner Kenah gave a bridge luncheon, and last Monday Mrs. Harry J. Wilhelm was hostess at a bridge. Yesterday Miss Suzanne Beatty was hostess at a luncheon in the Woman's Club, in honor of Margaret.

Drama Group Hears Talk By Kenyon

Enthusiasm of drama department members at the Congress of Clubs seems to soar with the mercury, for there was an unusually good attendance yesterday at the opening luncheon. Mrs. Chester F. Johnston was in her place as presiding officer and introduced Elmer Kenyon, honorary president of the Pittsburgh Drama League, who discussed the New York Theater Guild plays.

Mr. Kenyon spoke before luncheon in order that he might hurry off to a meeting of the Beaver Book and Play Club later in the afternoon. Mrs. John Bragdon, who conducted the department's study class, spoke of the St. John Irvine play, "The Ship," which the class had taken up that morning.

Miss Helen Irwin's reading of that charming little fantasy, "Maker of Dreams," by Oliphant Down, was one of the post-luncheon features of entertainment. Miss Irwin gave the playlet with a deftness and delicacy of interpretation and charm of voice that show how her art has grown in preparation for her forthcoming professional debut. To conclude the program there was a Javanese dance done in costume by Miss Betty Macdonald, New York danseuse, with Miss Bessie Hubach at the piano.

Miss Helen Kendall of New York, decoration consultant, will address the Woman's City Club Thursday afternoon with "Discrimination the Key to Style" as her subject. Miss Kendall has taken the arts course at Columbia courses at the Mansfield School at the Lenox School of Fine and Applied Arts, the Paris branch of the New York School of Fine and Applied Arts and at the Cornell School of Art, and has had considerable European travel with independent study in Italy and France. Two novel features distinguish Miss Kendall's lectures. They are illustrated in every detail by the actual materials and after the lecture those present are invited to consult her on their individual problems. Mrs. William J. Powell and her program committee are in charge of the afternoon.

Fox, former president of the Keystone Association for Historical Research, who gave an interesting talk.

Mrs. J. K. Robb, accompanied by Mrs. George Hoffman, sang several selections by Pennsylvania composers. A history of Pennsylvania was given by Mrs. Sayre Millen, and this was followed by Mrs. George W. Brown's paper on the Pennsylvania Dutch. Current

STYLISTS PREDICT TUNIC IN LINE FOR MUCH POPULARITY

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Sept. 26.—The tunic is tuning up for an extended appearance judging by the frequency with which it is seen everywhere he re. Last year a few courageous souls had their dressmakers make a tunic in lamé in conjunction with a black or brown velvet skirt. This year, practically every shop and dressmaking house is featuring the combination for both street and formal wear. It is a pleasing fashion, but it should be eschewed by the very petite woman as the long tunic has a tendency to "cut" the figure, especially when the tunic is of some brightly colored lamé worn over a dark skirt. But it is ideal for the woman of longer lines, and it is particularly liked by the more mature woman for her afternoon engagements, as it can be worn at luncheon and then to a matinee or a formal tea. Many of the lamé tunics are severely tailored, a most suitable treatment, as the material is so rich that an overdose of fussy treatment would kill it from a standpoint of smartness.

CHERUIT IS ONE of the dressmakers who favors the long tunic of lamé for afternoon wear and it is most discreetly handled by this designer. In the model shown here the tunic is of pink and gold with a slight salmon tinge. It is fitted slightly at the natural waistline and dips sharply at one side and in back. It is worn over a narrow skirt of black velvet.

FOR ABSOLUTELY formal affairs the suit of fine velvet with rich fur is both appropriate and graceful. Because of its very richness, however, it should be carefully treated to avoid an overwhelming effect. Martial et Armand is showing a suit which is an ideal exposition of the rich-material-simple treatment theme on which we have laid so much emphasis. We are therefore glad to have been able to have had a sketch made of this very good-looking suit. It is of dark blue Lyons velvet with a large collar of gray fox. The lower sleeve is slightly tucked from elbow to wrist. The jacket itself is fitted and has a circular peplum. Beneath this, a second peplum, likewise demurly flaring, is attached to the skirt which has a circular movement at the hem. The tailored treatment of this suit is its most effective point as it displays perfectly the beauty of material and trimming.

Carnegie Institute and University of Pittsburgh libraries today were the center of study for a group of British educators touring America as guests of the Rockefeller Foundation.

Harrod, historian and economist, respectively, of Oxford; Kenneth Sisam, commission secretary, and Sir Edmund K. Chambers, the latter accompanied by Lady Chambers.

Sir Frederick Kenyon said:

"With the lowered prices that have been introduced in your book market, the masses should benefit.

"While the Carnegie Trust in our country provides buildings, the libraries are maintained by the municipalities."

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Hay Sing, 43, proprietor of a Chinese restaurant, was shot to death by a robber in his establishment today. After a pistol battle with a policeman, John De Large, 17, Negro, was arrested charged with the killing.

WILL CREMATE MANSON'S BODY

The body of David C. Manson, who took his own life after killing his youthful wife, Mrs. Helen Manson, in their apartment at 44 Academy avenue, Mt. Lebanon, Sunday, will be cremated today and taken back to Chicago by his sister, Miss Jean Manson, of Chicago, who claimed the body yesterday.

Mrs. Catherine Kern, of Detroit, who claimed the body of her sister, Mrs. Manson, today, has not completed funeral arrangements.

It was learned yesterday that while the Mansons were on their way to a road house early Sunday morning, Mrs. Manson jumped out of her husband's machine during an argument and fled. Manson returned to his home about 3 a. m., it was learned, and Mrs. Manson returned about three hours later. It is believed that he killed her then.

SIDE WALKS of PITTSBURGH

by WILLIAM PFARR

The story sounds incredible but we'll raise our feeble right hand and attest to its veracity.

A Pittsburgh girl of wealth and standing enrolled as a freshman at a girls' college not too many miles away a few weeks ago.

The school's menu apparently didn't appeal to her and, in the dining room one evening, she called the waitress and ordered:

"Here, take this steak to the dean and ask her to cut it; I can't."

Two dozen other students gasped at such audacity and the startled waitress, ever obedient, fearfully carried the steak to the dean's office and made known the request.

The dean cut the steak into tiny bits and sent it back to the student.

Attorney Franklin Nevin, of Sewickley, moves about these days wondering about Page 5 of the Fiji Herald and Times. A few days ago the mailman brought Attorney Nevin a package from Suva, in the Fiji Islands, which proved to be a recent edition of the local newspaper. Across the sheet was scrawled, "See Page 5."

Mr. Nevin did. He read Page 5 once, twice, three times. He read every page in the paper and he didn't find any items especially interesting to him. He has never been in the Fiji Islands. He doesn't know what to make of it. Neither would you.

A few years ago Prof. Taylor, who teaches Latin to the up-and-coming at Peabody High School, found a novel way of passing the empty moments. When there were no classes in session, he'd gather a dozen students about him and play them all chess simultaneously. And the professor always won, although this may have been merely good politics on the part of the students.

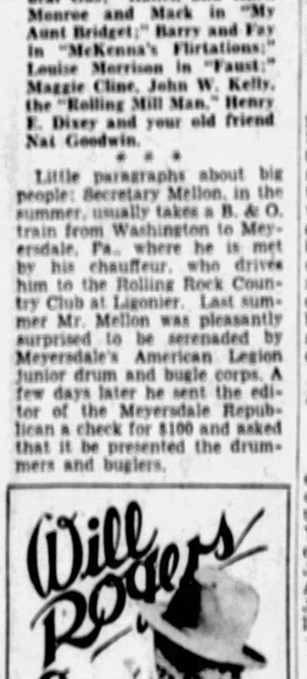
Little paragraphs about big people: Secretary Mellon, in the summer, usually takes a B. & O. train from Washington to Meyersdale, Pa., where he is met by his chauffeur, who drives him to the Rolling Rock Country Club at Ligonier. Last summer Mr. Mellon was pleasantly surprised to be serenaded by Meyersdale's American Legion junior drum and bugle corps. A few days later he sent the editor of the Meyersdale Republican a check for $100 and asked that it be presented the drummers and buglers.



BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Sept. 26

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

With all our interest attracted to Russian activities this week, I was joking Mr. Brisbane about me having been there and him not. Last night I got a cute letter from him which said: "Years ago European artists were kidding an American artist for painting scenes in Europe and yet he had never been over there. He replied, 'Well, Leonard Da Vinci painted a pretty fair picture of the Lord's Supper and he didn't even have a ticket to it.'" He is serious about this Russia. He thinks they are going to get somewhere. Well, anyhow, they got our Congress scared, and that's more than our country has been able to do with 'em.

WILL.

The caps will bear the red shield, emblem of the Army, and a few words calling attention to the appeal. It is the Reick-McJunkin Dairy Company's way of helping the Army advertise its need for funds.

The Pittsburgh Railways Company also is co-operating with the Army in advertising the campaign. Within the next week notices of the appeal will be printed on the back of weekly car passes. In addition, the company has contributed an inside car card space fore advertising the appeal. The campaign will be from October 1 to 11.

Elks Building Fund Rises to $76,750

Closing their building fund campaign, members of Etna Lodge of Elks, No. 932, announce subscriptions of $76,750, with pending subscriptions already assured to carry the fund to $80,000 or more. This, with $20,000 previously raised among the membership toward the building debt, makes a fund total of $96,750, irrespective of pending subscriptions. The closing phase of the campaign was undertaken by a squad of 23 men. L. A. Donaldson, exalted ruler, was general chairman.

PARK VOWS 'NUMBERS' ACTION

Will Take Up True Bills as Soon as Possible, He Says; Points to Record

True bills returned yesterday by the grand jury against 15 Hill district residents accused of conducting lotteries will not be "pigeon-holed," District Attorney Andrew T. Park announced today.

Park said:

"I have heard a rumor that these cases are to be 'pigeon-holed' by my office. That is untrue. I intend to start action as soon as possible. For the first time since 1914 the district attorney's office is up with its schedule. That is something to be proud of."

More than 400 cash prizes and ribbon awards will be given to exhibitors in the tri-state area in the annual potato and apple show of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce October 29 to 31, Henry Eby, Allegheny County farm agent and chairman of the chamber's show committee, announced yesterday. Hound Show and Fox Hunt Ends Tri-State Meet

CLAYSVILLE, Pa., Sept. 26.—Drag and live fox chases with barks of hounds echoing over hill and dale ended the three-day session of the tri-state district Hunters' Association meeting at Burnsville, near here. Exhibitors of fine dog flesh from Western Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia topped off the day's program with an important bench show, during which time hundreds of hound enthusiasts were permitted an opportunity to inspect dogs they watched chase b'rer fox over the countryside during the meet.

In the drag chases an attendant with a bag in which the body of a dead fox has been placed, drags it over the territory, leaving the scent of the animal for the dogs to pick up. The first hound in is acclaimed the winner.

Search was being made as the meet ended, for the persons who opened the fox cages and escaped with two fine specimens.

Mother Questions Cathie About Divorce Rumor

CHAPTER XXIX

Cathie thought Chester would have something to say about Lillian. She waited tense, after her husband came home, but nothing was said. "Half my worries are imaginary," she decided, "I haven't done anything wrong." But her conscience troubled her because she was happy, when she wasn't actually fretting.

So many things happened in the next few days. There was some money trouble with Chester. Farnsworth, always the indulgent father, suddenly put a stop to what he claimed was Chester's wasteful extravagance. "I give you enough to keep a family of fourteen!" he said angrily, "and I'm sick and tired of your overdrawing. You live on your income, or you go to work!"

"This is your doing!" Chester snarled, turning fiercely on Cathie. "I've seen it coming. You and your family of bloodsuckers. I told you to lay off me—I—"

"Chester! My boy!" Farnsworth cried, turning stricken eyes from one to the other. "Catherine, he doesn't know what he's saying!"

Shocked
Chester Causes Dad to Become Sick

"I damn well know what I'm saying. I'm going to say it too. You little snivveling nobody, coming in here, taking advantage of an old man's weakness. I'll show you—"

"Stop!" Cathie screamed. "Stop, don't you see what you're doing to him? Alfred—sit down, dear . . . water . . . Chester, get water . . ."

One look at his father, and Chester Farnsworth was glad enough to stop. He stood with his sallow face working, staring at the older man. "Why, what's the matter, dad? Look, Catherine . . . dad, dad's sick!"

"Yes, and you've done it, making a scene like that! Get some water or something. Oh, help me! Don't stand and look! He's going to faint."

Angered
Scene Causes Cathie to Hate Chester

Mr. Farnsworth did not faint. He let himself be helped to a chair, and the color came back to his grey face when Chester poured some brandy down his throat.

Cathie and Chester leaned over him, she on one side, he on the other. Mr. Farnsworth opened his eyes, and smiled, "Let us have peace," he said, and his voice sounded so old and weak and tired that it brought the tears to Cathie's eyes, "All I have is yours—you two shall share. Surely there is enough for both. Can't you trust me to be fair?"

Cathie began to cry. Pity and anger shook her. She hated Chester, hated him more than she had ever hated anyone in her life, more than she had thought it was possible to hate. And she couldn't even talk back to him without making more trouble for his poor father . . . her hands were tied . . . she clung to her husband, and wept.

"There, there, Catherine. It's all right," he said in his tired, old voice, stroking her hair, making her cry the harder.

"It's her filthy conscience!" she heard Chester say disgustedly. The old man answered shortly and bitterly. She couldn't make out the words, she didn't even care. After a while Cheong appeared and took him upstairs to bed. She would have remained in the room with Chester, too apathetic to move, but the old Chinaman made a hissing, whistling noise as he was going out of the door with her husband. She looked up and he signalled her to follow.

When she saw her husband comfortably in bed, and went to her own room she found the maid, Marguerite, already there, talking to herself excitedly, walking up and down swinging her long arms.

Puzzled
Cathie Wonders About Maid's Remark

"You hadn't ought to fight with him!" she cried, wheeling on Cathie, her red eyes glittering in her white, seamed face. "You can't beat him, that devil! Everything you say he'll turn against you. Then the two of them—the Farnsworth men will turn against you and what chance will you have then? None! You mark my words. If you—"

Cathie held up both hands in a gesture of hopeless weariness. She no longer minded the woman's tirades, and warnings. It seemed perfectly natural to be getting motherly advice from a maid, and wordless commands from a Chinese cook. Everything was upside down in this house . . . this was just part of its craziness. But she was too spent tonight. "Marguerite, if you say one more word to me I'll scream!" she said. "Then I'll keep right on screaming, and they'll have to lock me up somewhere. I tell you I can't stand much more."

The woman sighed, and began to help Cathie undress. Before she put the lights out she brought in a glass of hot milk. "Drink this, it will help you to sleep. And don't you worry, Mrs. Farnsworth, dear. It will soon be over."

What would be over? Cathie wondered a little, as she lay there, tense and aching from head to foot. She'd have liked to ask Marguerite what she meant, but it wouldn't do to get her started again. She lay

CONFERENCE BACKS HOME LABOR

Municipality May Undertake Own City Sewer Work As Method of Relief

Unemployment, a national problem, can be solved if every city cares for its own jobless men and women, city officials here decided.

Only citizens of Pittsburgh, the same officials decided, will be employed on any emergency work undertaken by the city this winter.

Their decisions came in the course of a conference during which they indorsed the proposition of Robert J. Alderdice to have the city do street and sewer jobs instead of letting them to contractors.

WORK LIST PLANNED

This is to be done in all cases where the work can be paid for out of direct appropriations. Jobs which must be paid in part by assessments against the abutting property holders must be done by contract, the conference decided, in the event some taxpayer should object to the more costly but work-providing method of using man power instead of machines.

Monday, Director of Public Works Edward G. Lang is to furnish a list of possible projects. At the same time Controller James P. Kerr will report on the financial condition of the city. These two men, with the Mayor, members of Council and City Solicitor Charles A. Waldschmidt participated in the conference.

KLINE FOR HOME LABOR

Before the meeting started the Mayor sent letters to all contractors doing city work requesting them to use Pittsburgh labor. His request, he insisted, is not selfish. He expressed the opinion that if each city solves its own unemployment problem the national problem will be settled.

If the emergency program is approved each laborer hired will have to prove that he is a resident of Pittsburgh, the Mayor said. The proposal to have men work four hour shifts was vetoed by Kline. He said:

"We will pay these men 55 cents per hour, the usual city rate for laborers. I don't think a man can support a family on four hours' work, or $2.20 a day. A full day will pay $4.40, which is not much, but it will help a lot in many cases."

With the Mayor, when he told the results of the conference, were President of Council John S. Herron and Councilman Harry A. Little. Little said:

"Remind the boys again that citizens of Pittsburgh are to be hired. If a fellow is from Los Angeles or Reno he can go there for a job. I don't mean we should not be charitable. But, as the Mayor says, if every city takes care of its own unemployed, the problem is solved."

LOPEZ LEADS STUDENT BAND

The classical side of Vincent Lopez, prince of jazz, has been brought to the fore in Pittsburgh, where today some 1,500 high school students are discussing the sudden appearance yesterday of the famous orchestra conductor who, for a short hour, entertained the students and led their orchestra.

Taken to the Peabody High School unnounced by Lee M. Lockhart, special supervisor of instrumental music for the Pittsburgh schools, Lopez yesterday devoted himself to making the acquaintance of the school orchestra. Leading the assemblage in the Dance of the Sylphs, Lopez took time out after the rendition to praise the execution of the orchestra in the highest terms. He told Wallace Frost, orchestra director:

"No orchestra in any other city to which I have traveled has excelled this one in execution."

As he prepared to leave, teachers and students begged Lopez for piano solos. A growing threng heard classical and near-classical solos resounding through the auditorium. Autographs, handshakes, conversations filled time before he could leave.

NOMINEE LAUDS TREASURY MEN AT BANQUET

Secretary Tells State Body Prudence and Courage Needed by Business Now

Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, Republican nominee for United States senator, was honor guest of the State Association of County Controllers at a dinner last night in the William Penn Hotel. Controller Robert G. Woodside, president of the organization, presided.

Davis paid tribute to the controllers as watchdogs of the public treasury to the end that improvements might be financed without too great a strain on taxpayers.

He declared he realized the controllers' most trying problem at present was to adjust the cost of improvements and general expenditures to tax revenue, bearing in mind the share that must be paid by the working population. He asserted:

"The country cannot be happy unless its millions of workers are safe and happy in their homes. And for the very reason that a large amount of taxes of the country must come from the farmers and the workers, it is therefore all the more your duty to see that the revenues are handled with the utmost care."

PRAISES LABOR

Davis averred that the present condition of business called for prudence, and also courage to do far-sighted planning for the return of prosperity. Concerning the labor situation, he said:

"Any unemployment at any time is a serious matter and during this period of recession we have had more of it than we should care to have. Our workers have borne this strain upon them with a patience and fortitude that seemed to me the outstanding glory of labor this year.

"But as all depressions pass, so will this one. As it passes, the industries will reopen, the temporarily unemployed will find their old jobs again and we shall go on to our normal and prosperous condition of business and life.

HEED ECONOMIC HEALTH

"Our temptation then will be to dismiss from mind all past discomforts like unemployment. But if we are wise, if we have taken warning from this economic setback, we will forever afterward give greater heed to our economic health and especially in this matter of keeping our millions of workers fully employed at a maximum wage.

"In recent years, even in boom times, the rapid extension of machinery tended toward the creation of a temporary period of unemployment for a number of our people. It is true that they eventually found new employment when their old jobs were taken away by machinery. But there remained the gap of time until they got adjusted to the new job.

"When we get back to normal times again we must not forget this break in our economic health. We must see to these temporarily unemployed, that they may be more rapidly adjusted to new pursuits. That is but one of the many things we must attend to in the interest of the worker."

LEADERS PLAN SAFETY MEET

The National Safety Congress informally opened here with 60 city and district safety council managers starting the annual three-day conferences in the William Penn Hotel prior to the convention's formal start Monday.

Managers represent approximately 25 per cent of the national population. Among features of the sessions devoted to council problems, will be the presentation of awards in the Third Inter-Council Industrial Accident contest. The awards, based on the greatest percentage of decrease in local industrial accidents will go to Richmond for first honors; Chattanooga, second, and Kansas City, third.

Twenty-two local district plants plan a daily program to emphasize the congress slogan, "Stay Alive." During safety week, the majority of concerns will blow plant whistles daily at 9 a. m. to spell the slogan in Morse code. A few plants will join with a single long blast.

DRIVERS GIVEN MIND TESTS

If you were caught in an automobile jam having serious accident possibilities, are you sure you wouldn't step on the gas instead of slamming on the brakes?

Are you sure you wouldn't lose your head and crash into the car in front instead of bringing your vehicle to a stop?

Do you think you are a safe driver?

The average motorist thinks he knows the answer to these questions and probably will admit he is a safe driver. In that he is in many instances wrong. The Accident Research Bureau here, making a study of such conditions, will show many a driver that he doesn't know so much about the matter.

TESTS CONDUCTED

Organized by the National Safety Council, with the co-operation of the City Mental Health Clinic and the Department of Psychology of the University of Pittsburgh, the bureau has been conducting tests on truck drivers and others over a period of several months. Findings have been reported that a large portion of those who submitted themselves for analysis are deficient in many respects when it comes to the science of applying themselves to situations under stress.

The tests are unique. They are a form of psychoanalysis, that Twentieth Century science which the average person thinks of in terms of Freud, Krafft-Ebing and Jung; but in this instance are confined to practical matters—such as the science of motoring.

Of several score drivers examined by Dr. Edward E. Mayer, director of the city mental health clinic, and his colleagues, many showed evidences of color-blindness. Others had poor equilibrium. Some, he said, showed mentalities of less than 11 years. A few showed by reactions to certain simple tests, they were unable to think quickly and act speedily under heavy strain.

PUZZLES PART OF EXAM

Preliminary tests for mentality include fitting of picture and jig saw puzzles into proper form. A time limit is given and the subject rated accordingly. The subject is then given rounds pegs to fit in square holes and vice versa. If he puts the square peg in a round hole the score naturally slumps. Next he is given a series of numbers to recite backwards—thus 347868—986402 or similar enumerations. He must tell what stories action pictures shown to him describe.

To top matters off he is given several spins in a Baranty chair, so-named for its inventor, a Viennese surgeon and psychologist.

The purpose of the Baranty chair, Dr. Mayer explains, is to determine whether the subject is in fit physical shape to assume the stiff details of driving from eight to 10 hours daily.

WORK TO GO ON

Although actual figures of the number of men examined have not been made public, results over the past several months have been so satisfactory that the clinic will be continued indefinitely. Anyone who wishes, according to Dr. Mayer, can submit himself for analysis.

A conference and symposium on accident prevention by psychoanalysis and study is to be a feature of the National Safety Congress here next week.

ARMED DRIVER FINED TWICE

When Motorcycle Patrolman Elmer Hunter attempted to arrest George White, 25, of 907 Vankirk avenue, Clairton, for operating his coupe in a reckless manner along Mifflin street, Hays, last night, he said he was confronted by a rifle in the hands of the driver, who then tried to escape.

After a chase, the officer succeeded in catching him. Searching the car, he reported he found a pair of knucklers and a knife. White later was examined by a city physician and reported to be under the influence of liquor. He was fined $25 in South Side Police Court and later turned over to Traffic Court on a charge of violating the automobile laws. He was fined $25 by Magistrate Charles Papale.

The Camera Question Box

Today's question: Prohibition seems to be the main issue in politics. Do you approve of this?

Miss Bower

MISS GRACE BOWER, Wexford, student, high school. No. I don't approve of prohibition being the main issue in politics. The public is certainly interested in the question, but it should not be a main issue in politics.

Miss Deane.

MISS HAZEL DEANE, Bradford Woods, student, high school. No. I don't approve of this being a main issue in politics. It has caused enough harm to the country already and should be done away with.

Miss English.

MISS MARGARET ENGLISH, City, student, high school. Prohibition is indeed a main issue in politics, but I don't believe it should be permanently such. I think every one will be thankful when this matter is finally settled.

LOUIS KUPFER, Mt. Oliver, clerk. As do all sensible people, I do not approve of prohibition. It has done more harm than good. Mere children brag about and use intoxicating liquor. This should not only be a main issue in the coming election, but should be settled permanently.

Mr. Kupfer.

Mr. Rigog.

FRANCIS RIGOG, South Side, clerk. I think the Eighteenth Amendment should be repealed, because of the conditions of the country. Such an issue should not control our politics.

Mr. Cayton.

BERNARD CAYTON, North Side, clerk. Prohibition seems to control everything. It is a thing that should be looked into immediately. Yes, I believe it should be a main issue in politics.

DOGS TO AID BLIND HERE

Several of Pittsburgh's blind will soon have "seeing-eye" dogs to assist them in their travels, as the result of the philonthropy of a group of Pittsburgh women.

Through G. H. Nickeson, of the Association of the Blind, arrangements are being made with Morris Frank, managing director of Seeing-Eye, Inc., for eight specially trained dogs for the use of the blind. Frank, himself blind, has a considerable part in training the canines for use as leaders for the sightless.

According to Frank, much care is given to the training of the dogs. It requires from two to three months of intensive work to prepare them. The dogs are taught to follow the verbal commands of their masters.

Prospect of Paris, Bermudas Sends Candidates Into Stirring Drive to Win

Pittsburgh girls are today more excited and thrilled than ever before with the prospect of being awarded the Gloria Swanson "What a Widow!" de luxe, all expenses paid, trip to Paris or one of the five free Bermuda tours that the Sun-Telegraph is giving away to amplify Miss Swanson's generous gift.

Scores of girls who sent in nomination blanks have been notified about the requirements and today they are all up on their toes with excitement. Scores more will get letters today telling what they must do to get one of these once-in-a-lifetime awards.

FULL WEEK IN PARIS

And what a trip that Paris tour will be! It will require nearly a month away from Pittsburgh and home again, including entertainment in New York for a day or two and a full week at the gayest of all cities—Paris. Miss Swanson is making plans to greet and entertain the lucky girl who joins a party of 23 other girls from various cities throughout the country. Nothing has been left undone that will make this trip a notable event.

In a way the Bermuda trips will be just as attractive—all expenses will be paid, a full week on these interesting islands, two days out on the Atlantic, the finest steamship accommodation, the best of hotels and extra money to spend.

SHIP MODEL SHOWN

In the lobby of Loew's Penn Theater there is a 15-foot model of an ocean liner such as that which will transport the lucky girl to Paris. This model cost $50,000 and there's a crowd around it all the time. Miss Swanson's new picture, "What a Widow!" opens at the Penn Theater today. The French liner Paris and the City of Paris were background for much of the making of this picture. That's why Miss Swanson is offering her trip.

Girls who would be interested in getting the Paris tour or one of the Bermuda tours should file a nomination blank today. It isn't too late. You'll find the blank in another part of today's Sun-Telegraph. Carefully read the requirements and if you are eligible send in your nomination today.

LUCKY GIRL

there worrying about Chester, crying a little, thinking of Gordon . . . how he'd save her from all this if he only knew . . . She thought she could never sleep, but the next thing she knew the sun was shining in at the window and she was thinking about breakfast . . .

That was the way it was . . . up and down . . . up and down. When you thought things were going all right something would happen, and when you thought you could never be happy again there'd be a new book, or a box of flowers from Gordon, and maybe a little note . . .

A Surprise
Mother and Sister Pay First Visit

One day in April when the world was heavy with spring and growing things and Cathie was whistling to herself as she filled the flower vases in the open-windowed library with lilacs and syringa, the Chinese boy came in bearing two cards on a tray. "Mrs. Edward Paige." "Miss Ruth Paige."

Cathie stared. Ma's card with its old-fashioned script, Ruth's up-to-date thin pasteboard with the old English engraving . . . Why, Ma and Ruth must be calling at last, but why the cards and the formality?

"My heavens, why didn't they come IN!" she cried, pushing the Chinese boy and the tray aside, and rushing across the hall to the small, blue drawing-room. There they sat on the edges of their chairs, hatted and gloved, the very picture of old-fashioned gentlewomen making a call.

"Mums . . . Ruth! To think that at last . . . oh, I'm so GLAD! Kiss me again, Ma . . . oh Ma, I've wanted you for so long, and here you ARE! But why, for heaven's sake, didn't you come right in where I was? I'm out in the library, fixing flowers. It's much the nicest room in the house . . . come out there and we'll be cozier and I'll get some tea and——"

She was a little breathless, a little shy . . . It seemed so funny, Ma and Ruth coming for the first time like this . . . Oh, it should have been different. They should have come right away, then it wouldn't have been awkward . . .

"Right in here!" she ran ahead, throwing open the door. They followed, still with their company smiles, and Cathie experienced the odd sensation of being tongue-tied in their presence. She chatted of the weather, the flowers, asked about her mother's neuralgia, the latest letters from Jean and Eddie, Ruth's teaching . . . Got mincing, polite answers.

"Shall we have tea first, or would you like to see the house? Maybe we'd better have tea first, and then I'll take you through. It seems so funny, you're just seeing it now. I'll ring and then——"

"No, don't ring. Don't call any servant," Mary Paige said quickly. She looked at Ruth, as if for help, but Ruth was looking out the window. She took a long breath, "Catherine, darlin'," she said in her frank, natural voice, so much like Cathie's, "I came because I'm worried. I had to see you. She says there's talk about you. She got it from her Lillian. She says that you and your husband are having trouble. She says there's talk in society that he is changing his will, and that——" her voice broke a little—"that he is going to divorce you."

Ruth went on staring out the window.

Cathie just looked. She couldn't find any words to answer.

Mary Paige's sorrowful eyes never left Cathie's. "I'm askin' you, darlin'—it isn't true, is it? It's just talk?"

RUNAWAY MINE TRIP KILLS MAN

Rushing down the steep incline to the tipple of the Moon Run Coal Company, Steubenville pike, one mile west of Crafton, a string of mine cars wrecked the weighing office and killed one man. The dead man is Harvey Fisher, 37, of 5 North Grandview avenue, Crafton.

Nineteen loaded cars were being dropped to the tipple late yesterday when they broke away and started down the single track incline. Near the tipple, where there is a double track, the string broke, three cars continuing to the bottom and crashing into the office, in which Fisher was working. He was caught in the wreckage and so badly injured that he died after being removed to Presbyterian Hospital.

Cultivation of Cocoa Has Interesting History

Montezuma, Aztec emperor, served to the royal Cortez cocoa sweetened and spiced with honey and other flavors.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,
Former Health Commissioner of New York City
United States Senator From New York

When mothers look about for something nourishing and appetizing for the kiddies, they cannot do better than bring forth the cocoa pot. Children love cocoa, and when made rightly, it is good for them. Most grownups like it, too, and both cocoa and chocolate are deservedly popular.

Tropical America furnishes the first authentic records of the cultivation of the cocoa tree. De Candolle, the Swiss botanist, stated that the cocoa tree was cultivated in Mexico thousands of years ago. Linnaeus, the Swedish botanist, classified and named the plant "Theobroma Cacao," meaning "Food of the Gods." In 1735, in time, the word "Cacao" became "cocoa," and the product is thus known to all English-speaking peoples.

FASCINATING HISTORY

Many are the stories of romance and adventure surrounding the cultivation of the cacao tree. Prescott, described in his work "The Conquest of Mexico," how Montezuma, in entertaining Cortez and his followers, served libations of chocolate flavored with vanilla and spices. It was so prepared that it had a froth and the consistency of honey, and was taken cold.

It is said Montezuma took no other beverage than this, and it was served to him in golden goblets. At one feast Montezuma was served with 50 goblets of the drink! Likewise, 2,000 jars of it were served to guards and attendants, after which the goblets were thrown into a lake surrounding the palace. After the conquest of Mexico, the Spaniards drained the lake and retrieved quantities of these golden goblets.

It has been told, also, how the Aztec tribes spent all day and much of the night in dancing, with no other nourishment than their cacao. This well proves the sustaining properties of chocolate.

POPULARITY SPREADS

It wasn't long before the cultivation of the cocoa tree spread from Mexico to many other parts of the world. Upon the marriage of Anne to Louise XIII, and of Marie Theresa to Louis XIV, chocolate drinking was one of the features and naturally it became fashionable in the French court.

The cocoa tree grows to a height of 12 to 20 feet. Its flowers and fruit grow not only upon the trunk of the tree, but on the branches as well. The crop is an all round the year one. The pods, a foot or more long, contain the beans, some of which are as large as almonds. The bean is flat and has a more or less bitter, astringent taste.

HEALTHFUL SUBSTANCES

The principal substances found in raw cocoa are fat, protein, starch, theobromine, tannin and ash. The starch adds much to the nutritive quality.

Some persons cannot assimilate fats well, and for this reason they may not make use of chocolate without uncomfortable symptoms. But for most persons, including invalids, both the products of this tree, cocoa and chocolate made with milk are very wholesome and appetizing.

knead for a minute. Roll into a rectangular shape to ¼ inch thickness. Sprinkle generously with well-sugared pitted cherries (one pint) and roll up like a jelly roll. Place in a greased baking dish—slash diagonally across the top and bake in medium oven. Serve with sweetened cherry sauce. Serves six.

CABBAGE WITH A LEMON DRESSING—The same dressing may be used over shredded lettuce. Chill the salad thoroughly before serving.

Mix thoroughly ¾ teaspoon salt, 1-16 teaspoon pepper, 1½ tablespoons sugar, 6 tablespoons cream and 3 tablespoons lemon juice. Marinate the shredded cabbage in French dressing and just before serving combine with the above.

Lemon is also extensively used for a garnish. Select fruit with bright clean skins and cut into fancy shapes, slices, baskets and add a touch of color of mint, finely chopped parsley, or pimento strips.

MALTED MILK FUDGE—Boil together 3 heaping tablespoons malted milk dissolved in a little warm water, 2 cups granulated sugar, 2 heaping tablespoons cocoa or 2 squares unsweetened chocolate, ¾ cup of water, pinch salt. Cook to soft ball stage, when a bit is tried in cold water. Stir in 1 tablespoon butter and beat until creamy. Nuts may be added if desired.

SOUR CREAM COOKIES—Sift flour, then measure 3 cups (pastry flour). Resift with ½ teaspoon soda, ½ teaspoon baking powder and ⅛ teaspoon powdered mace. Add 1 tablespoon vinegar to ½ cup evaporated milk. Cream ¼ cup butter. Add 1 cup sugar gradually and cream until smooth. Then add 1 well-beaten egg and ½ teaspoon lemon extract. Add flour and milk alternately, beginning with the flour. Put a portion of the dough into a pastry tube. Hold tube close to the pastry sheet and force out a small amount of dough for each cooky. Bake in a moderate oven.

BOSTON COOKIES—Sift flour, then measure 3 cups flour. Resift with 1 teaspoon soda, ½ teaspoon salt and 1 teaspoon cinnamon. Cream 1 cup shortening until creamy and add 1½ cups sugar, continuing to cream until light and fluffy.

Add 3 well-beaten eggs and 1½ tablespoons cream, then the flour mixture. Lastly add ½ cup currants, chopped, ½ cup raisins chopped, and 1 cup of chopped nuts. Roll the dough to ⅛-inch in thickness, using as little flour as possible. Bake in a moderate hot oven.

MAPLE CHARLOTTE—Put 1 cup of corn syrup in the top of a small double boiler. Dissolve 2 tablespoons cornstarch in 2 tablespoons of cold milk, add to the hot syrup and cook until thickened. Stir while cooking. Place in a pan of cold water, stir occasionally until mixture is nearly cold. Split 12 small lady fingers in half and line a mould with them. Whip ½ pint of cream, then add the syrup, slowly beating just enough to mix well. Pour into the lined mould and set in the refrigerator for several hours to chill. Serve garnished with a red or green cherry.

TOMATO AND CREAM CHEESE SALAD—Wash and peel as many uniform tomatoes as number you are to serve. Cut each tomato petal style, scooping out but very little of the seed pulp. Sprinkle with salt and place in the refrigerator to thoroughly chill. When ready to serve place each tomato on a lettuce leaf. Fill the center with cream cheese may be tinted green, and between each petal place a whole salted almond. Top the cream cheese with a red or green cherry. Serve a Thousand Island dressing with the salad.

FROZEN CHOCOLATE WITH WHIPPED CREAM — Scald 4½ cups of rich milk. Melt 3 squares of unsweetened chocolate in a small saucepan placed over hot water, and add ¾ cup sugar, 1-16 teaspoon salt, and gradually 1½ cups boiling water. Boil for 10 minutes, add to chocolate scalding milk and another ¾ cup sugar. Cool, add 1½ teaspoons vanilla, freeze and serve garnished with flavored and sweetened whipped cream.

BAKED EGG AND NOODLES—Line individual baking dishes with cooked, well buttered noodles. Then add a layer of chopped cooked spinach and another layer of finely chopped asparagus.

Drop an egg in the center of each dish. Season with salt, pepper, and a few grains of paprika.

Cover with another layer of the buttered noodles, and bake in a moderate oven about 5 minutes to set the egg and brown the top.

PEAR AND PEACH PICKLES—Use 12 pounds of peeled fruit, 8 pounds of sugar and 1 quart of vinegar. Prepare a spice bag of 1 tablespoon whole cloves, 1 teaspoon mace or nutmeg and 1 piece of ginger root. Make a syrup of the vinegar and sugar, add the spice bag and 4 or 5 whole sticks of cinnamon. Drop a few in syrup and cook until they can be pierced with a straw. Remove and add more fruit. Pack in sterilized jars and fill jars with the hot syrup.

MISS HARD-BOILED

By JANE DIXON

Raquel and Jerry Married By Captain of Boat

CHAPTER LXIII.

At 10 o'clock on a morning in midsummer, the liner Marathon, flying an American flag, parted the waters of an ocean that flaunted liquid jade and sapphire smiles in the face of an ardent sun. Only a few minutes before, the ship had crossed the imaginary line that separates the domain of waters adjoining a country from the free republic of the open sea.

Shortly thereafter Capt. Herbert Hardy, urbane skipper of the Marathon and inveterate fomentor of maritime romance, opened the ship's log and placed a pen near an ink-well so that it would be handy for use. He wore the most immaculate and the newest of his uniforms and the broadest and happiest of his smiles.

In a few minutes there was the sound of voices outside on the bridge. The captain hurried to the door of his quarters to receive a young woman in a swirl of filmy gray. He caught the faint perfume of the lilies of the valley that touched the creamy pallor of her cheek.

"Positively the most beautiful piece of God's handiwork I have ever seen," Capt. Hardy said to himself, noticing how the sable smoke-cloud of the young woman's hair made its escape from her tight little gray turban. "And her eyes! Like a patch of black night at sea with flecks of phosphorus where the ship cut the waves."

Married at Sea

The young woman was closely followed by a well-set-up man in a blue serge suit and a look in his eyes that must make the sun hide for shame at the weakness of its shining.

He motioned two officers of the ship waiting on the bridge into his quarters. They answered with the alacrity of men who find joy in their task.

Five minutes later Capt. Hardy bent to take the privilege of his office from the lips of the young woman in gray.

"Mrs. Gerald Parker," he said in his ringing voice that floated out and pleasantly reached the ears of a seaman at the wheel of the ship. "I wish you a long life and a happy one."

"Jerry," he said, turning to the young man in the blue serge suit, "you look like a sure cure for bachelors."

Raquel Rojos signed her name in the book that was the ship's log: "Raquel Rojos Parker."

This man with the gray-gray eyes, the grave lips, the straight shoulders that inclined toward her like two solid rocks upon which she could rest her weary head, was her husband.

The hunger of his kiss!

Raquel stirred uneasily. Her black eyes opened wide. In that instant she was fully awake, her brain clear, her body tingling. It was thus she had been greeting the day, with zest with an exquisite joy in being alive.

Jerry was pushing the sable cloud of her hair back from her brow with just that touch of man-tenderness that she liked.

"Raquel," he said, "Wake up, dear. In half an hour we'll be passing the Statue of Liberty."

"But I'm no longer free," she twitted him.

"The deuce you're not." He ruffled her hair on the pillow. "I haven't tried issuing any orders yet. I know better. But here's one now. We're going straight from the ship to the City Hall. Then to the Little Church Around the Corner."

"But, Jerry, we're just as much man and wife as we ever can be."

"I know. That's why another little wedding won't do us any harm. Put on your wedding gown, Mrs. Parker, and get ready to be double tied. We'll stop on the way and get the lilies. I want you to look exactly as you did that morning when the skipper kissed the bride."

Reach New York

New York. Shining towers reaching to touch the golden glory of the sun.

The hum of the city came to her like a muted melody. This was home. Homeland.

Raquel wondered if on their way uptown from that dim altar where for the second time she pledged herself to Jerry, they would pass Chez Alphonse.

No. They were traveling another route. Jerry took care that they should. Nothing of her past was to intrude itself upon this perfect hour of their homecoming.

Would there be a cable from Alphonse? Recriminations? Bitterness? No. That could not be. Alphonse had no way of knowing where they would be.

Her heart was heavy for the chalky little Frenchman.

A note sent by cable from the ship the afternoon of the day she had written her new name into the ship's log. That was all she had left of herself to Alphonse.

She had wanted Jerry to look at the note before she sent it to the radio room. He would not.

"It is for your eyes, dear," he told her. "Your eyes and his."

So she spent an agonizing hour culling words that would convey in the small measure of which words are capable her misery of regret of pain that it must be as it was.

Message to Alphonse

In the end she found only a few of her jumbled phrases her pattern of transmitted thought, would do.

"I was married today at sea and am going home. Why I cannot explain without hurting you more than I have already done. You will remain in my heart always. If you should find it possible to see me again, to resume our precious friendship, I shall be happy beyond what you can ever know.

"RAQUEL ROJOS PARKER."

She knew Jerry was waiting for her on deck, restless and unhappy. What grinning devils of suspicion must be jabbing at him with their poisoned forks!

The lavish fetes that had made her the Queen of Beauty in the Capital of Beauty. The constant presence of Alphonse by her side, guarding her, exhibiting her as if she were some rare jewel in a shop window. The house in Neuilly.

She knew they were but part of the harvest of her ruthless ambition that took much and gave nothing. But Jerry—did he know?

What had been, had been. She rang a bell and dispatched the message.

True Devotion More Joy-Giving Than Gayety's Sparkle, Says Fay King

By FAY KING

Sometimes in the same family two sisters will be as different in their tastes and inclinations as strangers.

One will be dressy and dancy and gay, the other serious and thoughtful and devoted.

The gay one may make a more brilliant marriage, but not a happier one.

She may be able to do a great deal for her family. But they in turn are still able to do a great deal for her, from their riches of affection and understanding.

After all our little likes, or dislikes and inclinations, in this direction or that, are only those small distinctions of personality.

Fundamentally the majority of us are sound and can always be depended upon to do the right thing at the right time.

Travelers Have Narrow Escape as Car Skids

To my last moment of consciousness I shall not forget my feeling of utter helplessness as our car began to skid upon the precipitous mountain road.

I had been descending the hill so slowly in first speed that the car did not crash against the mountainside as it surely would have done if we had been coming down more rapidly. A rebound like that would have sent us hurtling through the fence on the other side and hurled us to certain death far below. But as it was its impact against the mountainside at the end of our circular movement was a glancing blow only sufficient to turn the machine almost completely around so that we were facing the upward slope but perilously near the precipice. The engine had stalled and the car was slipping backward. With a little fatalistic feeling I put on the emergency brake and the backward sliding stopped.

For a breathless fraction of a second I sat motionless dazed. Then I got hold of myself again for with me a motoring danger over is one forgotten and turned around with a smile.

"Well, we're here!" I said inanely but snatching at the first words which came into my mind. Lillian was deadly pale but her eyes were unflinching and she managed a wraith of a smile in answer to mine.

"That's all that matters," she said. "But what do we do now, climb the mountain again?"

"I think here's where Yale goes into a huddle, next we pass Auntie Madge," Mary demanded with a wide grin and I saw that she had not been frightened at all.

"Yes. I'm content to sit perfectly still for a minute or two," I told her.

"Mind if I get out of the car and take a look at the rest of this downhill slope?" she asked.

"Not a bit, but wait a second." I turned off the ignition of the stalled engine and threw the gear lever into first.

"It can't slide back on you now," I told her. "This emergency is good, but I don't want to take any chances. And be careful. It's dark down that road. The lights are turned up the slope now instead of down."

"But the snow makes everything perfectly visible," Mary replied as she climbed down from the car. "Good night, ladies," she sang. "I'm going to leave you now, but I'll be back anon."

The sound of her hurried footsteps crunching the snow at the edge of the road died away around the curve, and Lillian gave a mirthless little laugh.

"What wouldn't I give to feel like that again," she said. "I'm getting old, Madge."

There was a weariness a letting down in her voice which I never had heard before.

"What utter nonsense!" I said crossly. "Everybody over 25 is too old for exuberant spirits like Mary's. I wish I'd told her to see if the rest of the road is blown clear of snow as this is. We're not very far from the level here. This is the last bad stretch. I was thanking my particular little joss that we were safely past danger when we began to skid."

"I know," Lillian said comprehendingly. "That happens so often, in other things than motoring."

I wondered if she were thinking of her recent experience when the settled happiness of her new life with her husband had been broken into by Robert Navarin's letter, and the news of his condition. But I hastened to make a reply which would hold no hint of my conjecture.

"So many accidents happen just at the end of experiments or journeys," I agreed easily. "I suppose one unconsciously relaxes his precautions but I really can't accuse myself this time of carelessness. Solomon ought to have known the way of a skidding automobile. He would have added it to his famous four."

"Eagle, serpent, ship, man, motor car," Lillian checked off idly, but I fancied that the gloom in her voice had lifted and I kept on talking against time.

"I only hope there's no bad glare of ice between here and the level," I said and noted with satisfaction that her quick, "What's your plan?" held distinct interest entirely different from her listless reception of my other conversational attempts.

"I haven't formulated anything definite as yet," I told her, "but I am wondering if backing down the rest of the way wouldn't be the best solution."

"What's the matter with walking down to the nearest farmhouse and telephoning for a garage man?" she asked.

"No garage in this section will be open for two hours; we're a long way from a house and the car left this way would be a distinct menace to any other motorist. I don't want anyone's death on my conscience. Besides, there's that man behind us, you know."

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Saturday, September 27

A day of important enterprise and movement is indicated by the predominant lunar activities. There is prospect of a sudden change or journey which may prove of far-reaching influence. If this be in connection with new undertakings every precaution and discretion should be made against duplicity and fraud as there is a definite menace of financial loss and disrupted and undermined plans.

Those whose birthday it is may count on an eventfully year with the promise of a sudden change or travel which may completely affect the life and environment. New projects are under a baneful ray being imperiled by treachery or fraud. But employment is well fortified and with general precaution and discretion all may be satisfactory in the end.

A child born on this day may be ingenious original inventive but fond of change and travel. It may succeed in employment but with a possible tendency to extravagance and speculation and also being subject to fraud and subtle attack it may need to be trained in conservatism and discretion.

Love—and Other Trifles

This world will be a better place when the women get tired of "reforming" it and go back to adorning it and making it more comfortable to live in.

Making a solid, substantial husband out of a great lover is about as practicable as making a solid, substantial meal out of a chiffon salad and a chocolate sundae. Still, great lovers and chocolate sundaes have their charms.

The average man appears to do his work and earn his living between the half of his life that he spends in "Falling in love" and the half that he spends in crawling out of it.

There are only four cures for love—time, marriage, hard work and another love. And the quickest and surest of these is the last.

There are moments when the wife of an attractive man feels that it would be easier to have some woman steal her husband than to have a lot of them continually borrowing him and returning him like a library book.

There are pet dogs who follow every friendly whistle and men who respond to every woman's "come-hither" glance. The price of their fidelity is eternal vigilance. But, is it worth the price?"

* * *

Wedding presents no longer have to be solid—just lightly plated and guaranteed to last for a few seasons.

Funny! A girl MAY succeed in convincing a man that she doesn't love him—but never in convincing him that she doesn't enjoy his love-making.

A friend is most entertaining when he is lively and witty; a lover when he is deadly serious.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

A Church Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am to be married very soon and am having a very simple church wedding. I am not sending out invitations but am asking a few of my friends. Should I send announcements to those present at the wedding?

W. M. W.

No, announcements are sent only to those who are not invited to the ceremony.

The Groom's List of Guests

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. When sending out wedding announcements, does the bride send announcements to the groom's immediate family, or is it customary to send to all his relatives and friends?

2. Should the groom present a list of the relatives and others to whom he wishes the announcements sent?

3. When only the parents of the bride and groom are present at a wedding, other than the best man and the bridesmaid, is it necessary to have a wedding breakfast when the couple are leaving immediately for a trip?

4. At a simple home wedding, if the bride carries flowers does the bridesmaid have flowers also?

M. J.

1. Yes. Invitations are sent to all the relatives of the groom. As a matter of fact, the most important invitation that is sent is the one to his mother and father, which should be the first one that is sent.

2. Yes, he gives this list to the bride and her mother.

3. No, this is a question of choice and convenience.

4. Usually.

At the Dinner Dance

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. At a dinner dance (formal) if you are conversing with some one on either side of you and a gentleman comes to ask you for a dance, should you always pardon yourself as you arise to dance, and would it be proper to introduce this gentleman who asks you to dance to those sitting on your right and left if they are not acquainted?

READER.

1. If you are in the midst of a conversation when the gentleman comes to ask you to dance, you should excuse yourself, since you have interrupted the conversation. It is not necessary to introduce the gentleman who has asked you to dance to the gentlemen sitting next you at dinner. You may do so if you wish, as for instance in a case where you know the gentlemen have mutual friends or mutual interests, and therefore you wish especially to have them know each other. But it usually seems forced.

Household Hints

Never keep your carving knives in the drawer with the other kitchen utensils. It is a dangerous practice as one is apt to cut oneself while reaching for something else and the contact with the other cutlery will dull the sharper knives.

Sometimes the edges of unused sheets, pillowcases and towels in the linen closet become soiled from dust. To prevent this slip underneath the pile a clean, discarded sheet and bring the edges up over the linens. This will keep them immaculate indefinitely.

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

Sometimes a Betrayed Wife Has Two-Timed Herself by Her Own Stupidity!

The Man . . . the Other Woman . . . and the Out-of-date Wife . . . they've been filling this column lately with their moans and mutterings.

You've heard the man's story—how he at last found a "girl who understands" but the wife "won't let him go"—

You've heard the Other Woman's story—how she is denied happiness because of that faded woman who stands in her way—

And now today comes the story of the wife who was worshiped and prized in her lovely youth and neglected and despised in her shabby, weary age.

It's a tragic story. Read it—and as you read, answer these two questions.

Are the man and the other woman to blame?

Or is the wife herself largely to blame?

Dear Miss Martin:

"I can't help writing an answer to the question you asked recently regarding the wife who tries to hang onto an unwilling husband.

"If I were a younger woman I would say 'No, she shouldn't try to keep him,' but being a mother who has worked hard, and had a lot of bad health, I cannot do so.

"Unfortunately, this is an age that demands youth, and more unfortunate still, is the fact that it seems to demand it mostly of women. A man at 40 is young enough to marry a girl of 20 without causing any comment. He's young enough to find work for himself. But if it's a woman—what then? It's on this situation that my answer is based.

"A man works hard to support his family. True. But his hours are limited. His work is all mapped out. And his leisure time, too.

"But a woman of ordinary circumstances? She's on the job 24 hours of every day.

"She looks at nothing but dishes to be washed, children to be taken care of, and household duties to be attended to, continuously, alone, always alone, and where money is scarce. For every dollar must be stretched as far as possible.

"On the other hand a man . . . no matter how his wife must get along . . . must look well at business, must have money to spend for lunches, etc., and mingles with people continually.

"During all these hard working years of his, he is expanding. His very work demands it. While at home, his wife is tied down, narrowing and shrinking.

"Then, one fine day, Mr. Man, in the shirt his wife has washed so white, sees a girl in the office with a sparkle in her eye and the joy of life written all over her. She can have those things. Life's never crushed them out of her. He takes her to lunch. Of course, she is witty, full of the latest wisecracks. Her body is strong and supple. Not broken from bearing children and sitting up nights with them when they're ill. Her laughter is light. She has been sleeping while his wife has been walking the floor.

"Oh well. Why go on? We've all seen it. In a little while, Mr. Man finds he's in love. Easy enough. If friend wife will only free him! Then there's more heartache for Mrs. Wife. The home is broken. Money divided now between two homes . . . and with all her wrinkles and weary bodies she must go out and learn a trade and go to work. For if Mr. Man couldn't support her properly before . . . how is he going to do it now? He says, 'I will pay for the children's support.' But what will he pay for it with?

"It's all very good and nobly said . . . but should he lose his job or need the money himself, you must do some real running to get it. In addition to paying some lawyer to help you get it.

"Thinking of all these things, I can't help but agree with the worn-out wives. Of course I can only see the side of the wage earner. The moneyed class is something I know nothing about. I only know that the woman of 40 today, if her health is not what it should be, and her energies are burned out from drudgery, is done unless she has married a man—a real man, who has lived through the struggle of existence with her.

"MRS. E. G. GAND."

There's the story. Your heart must be stone if it doesn't wring you. And yet—is it all the story?

Must a wife, even of the "laboring classes," lose all her beauty and charm and enthusiasm in 20 years of home-making and baby raising?

Is housekeeping really such a frightful problem? Some—perhaps most—find it so. Others, who have just as big families, just as slim pocketbooks, don't find it so. They plan and budget and systematize—they run their home as business women run their office work—and at 40 they are as up-to-date as their husbands. Are they the rare exceptions? Isn't it possible for other women to follow their example? In short—why is the average wife a flop at 40? Is it because life has two-timed her? Or is it because she has two-timed herself by stupid methods?

What's your answer?

Furnishing Your Home

Table Lamps

Since lamps have their fashion points, just as dresses have, it's interesting to note right now, that table lamps have come up in fashion at a great rate. They are now used in fashion-knowing comfortable living rooms more than any other type of lamp.

And there must be lots of lamps—because many lamps at night make rooms places of warmth and graciousness. So the natural result is the increase in the number of table lamps.

There are four types of table lamps that are particularly popular now. For each type there are certain materials and certain colors that are most right in fashion. It's important in choosing a lamp to know which is which. The urn shape is one of the best. It is most popular in painted pottery. It also comes in a painted metal known as "tole."

If it's pottery, the best-liked colors are antique gold or soft apple green. If it's tole, then it will most likely be ivory, red or green, in antiqued tones that look as though mellowed by time.

The correct shades for the urn-shaped lamps are either silk or parchment. One good type of silk shade is trimly pleated in beige, gold or green. The parchment shade we would call best is hexagonal in shape, with painted bands and floral motifs in one or more of the panels.

The modern bowl shape is another popular table lamp. These bowl shapes are gleaming affairs, with their bases of highly glazed Dutch, French or American pottery and their tightly stretched shades of shining taffeta.

The favored colors for the bowls are green, strawberry red, cream or golden yellow.

The candelabra table lamps—the third type—are best used in pairs at either end of a long living room table, but can be used singly on a table at each end of the sofa or beside a chair.

These are of metal—nickel, silver, bronze or tole. With the nickel, silver or bronze bases shades of parchment paper or tailored silk are correct. With the tole bases the shades can be tole, too.

Chinese celedon lamps are for the more elaborate type of living room. They have an ornate effect, with their bases embossed in Chinese floral designs, their carved teakwood stands and their pagoda shaped silk shades.

The shade should be of plain silk or damask, because there is so much ornamentation on the lamp itself. It should be lined in plain white, cream or gold silk. The finial—the ornament on the top—is of carved soapstone or jade.

The shades for all table lamps now are best in fashion when tailored and fringeless.

Of course the type of table lamp is determined by the type of one's living room furniture and its color scheme. The lamp is an important part of the ensemble of a room and should harmonize with it.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Know How to Sleep for Health

We derive all knowledge from the five senses: seeing, hearing, smelling, tasting and feeling. Each of these special functions depends upon a delicate and finely adjusted mechanism. Overuse will damage or destroy it. Regular rest and sleep are essential to its normal activity.

DR. COPELAND

Sleep is a great mystery. We know that it is a degree of unconsciousness, but no one has ever solved the problem of exactly what it is. Brain and nerves, when tired and worn, are recreated in sleep.

Prolonged sleeplessness in the human being damages the brain and nervous system most, but other serious bodily changes occur also. The body temperature falls, there are degenerative changes in the fatty tissues and other serious effects are felt.

Numerous experiments on animals have established the fact that loss of sleep is far more dangerous to life than starvation. A sleepless animal at the end of three or four days is as miserable as a starved one at the end of 10 or 15 days.

It is very important to know how to sleep. To have satisfying and refreshing sleep one must have the right conditions. Quietness and freedom from light are absolutely essential to sound sleep. Even a ray of light may send its disturbing message to the brain. The brain is not at rest if any one of the special organs is working.

Probably you have often been awakened by the sharp blast of an automobile horn or a disagreeable smell floating in through an open window or by a sudden bright light shining. If any of these annoying things were kept up long enough positive illness might follow.

Even though you sleep through any one of these disturbances, the nerves carry the message to the brain. The quality of sleep is changed. It is much less restful and restorative than if the sleeper hear none of these disquieting factors.

A nervous person, or one who is ill or recovering from an illness, should have sleeping quarters where stillness and darkness reign. Even a night lamp is bad for profound and restful sleep.

Very often sleeplessness comes from indigestion of some sort. Many persons cannot eat anything just before sleeping. Banish worry if you would sleep well. One's mental state has much to do with this business of sleeping and why worry anyway?

The vigor, efficiency and length of days are promoted by giving the special senses nothing to do during the hours of sleep. That is why care must be taken to provide conditions favorable to sleep.

Soak ½ pound crackers in milk and put chicken, onions, crackers and pork in layers in kettle. Season with salt and pepper. Thicken with 2 tablespoons flour and let all boil up together.

CREAMED CODFISH — Soak codfish in cold water until soft; shred in very small pieces; put over fire in stewpan with cold water; let come to boil; turn off this water carefully and add milk to fish. Set over fire again and boil slowly about 3 minutes. Now add good-sized piece butter, shake of peper and thicken with 1 tablespoon flour in enough cold milk to make a cream. Boil 5 minutes longer.

EGG PLANT MARMALADE Peel 2 eggplants and cut into small pieces. Add ¾-pound sugar to 1 pound egg plant. Put into a small sauce pan and cover sparingly with water. Boil until soft and brown. Add 1 teaspoon of bruised ginger root and juice of 1 lemon and a few slices of lemon rind. Simmer slowly until consistency of jam.

TUTTI FRUTTI RICE PUDDING—Cook a cup of washed rice in 2 cups of water in a double boiler until the water is completely absorbed. Add while rice is hot ⅜ of a cup of butter and ⅜ of a cup of sugar, 5 well-beaten eggs, 1 teaspoon salt, 4 ounces of seeded raisins, chopped and very highly floured, 4 ounces each of currants and candied citron cut in fine strips, ½ cup of sherry and a tablespoon of grated nutmeg. Add a quart of thin cream and mix well. Bake in a buttered dish for an hour or until the rice is done. Serve hot or cold.

CONNECTICUT CLAM ROAST—Open clams and leave in lower shell. Season with salt, cayenne, dots of butter and grated onion. Replace top shell and tie with string to hold together. Bake 15 minutes in a very hot oven. Remove upper shells; sprinkle with lemon juice and tomato catsup and serve.

GRAPE JELLY—4 cups (2 lbs.) juice, 8 cups (3½ lbs.) sugar, 1 bottle pectin.

Use only fully ripened fruit. Stem grapes and crush thoroughly. Add ½ cup water; stir until mixture boils, and simmer, covered, 10 minutes. Drip through jelly bag. Measure juice and sugar into large saucepan; stir, and bring to a boil. At once add pectin, stirring constantly, and bring again to a full rolling boil and boil ½ minute. Remove from fire; let stand 1 minute; skim, pour quickly. Cover hot jelly with film of hot paraffin; when jelly is cold, cover with ⅛ inch of hot paraffin. Roll glass to spread paraffin on sides. Malagas and Tokays set slowly. Requires about 3 pounds grapes. Makes 11 to 12 eight-ounce glasses.

FRUIT WHIP—Dissolve 1 package of fruit flavored gelatine in boiling water (1 cup). Add 1 cup of raspberry juice, may be the boiled fresh berries or the canned berries. Set the bowl in cracked ice and when the mixture is almost set, beat with an egg beater to a stiff froth. Fold in 1 cup of berries and 8 marshmallows cut in pieces. Turn into molds and chill. Serves 12. Serve with whipped cream or a fruit sauce.

CATHOLICS END OMAHA MEET

OMAHA, Neb., Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Marching to the strains of solemn chants through a cold drizzle, 25,000 Catholics took part in a colorful procession here to close the sixth national Eucharistic congress.

Thousands more lined the sidewalks about St. Cecilia's Cathedral. Preceded by an Army band, the line of marchers, composed of men, women and children, pushed through the rain for several miles, then climaxed their procession by kneeling on the wet cathedral grounds to attend benediction celebrated simultaneously on three outdoor altars.

A catastrophe was averted when fire broke out in the choir gallery of the cathedral while the Rt. Rev. John J. Dunn, auxiliary bishop of New York, was celebrating mass attended by thousands of nuns and lay women. Women were quieted by nuns and firemen extinguished the blaze while the mass continued.

WIND AND SNOW SWEEP WEST

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—A terrific windstorm, causing at least one death, several injuries and unestimated property damage struck widely separated parts of Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma late yesterday. The storm was accompanied in places by lightning, hail and rain.

A woman identified only as Mrs. Webster was killed at Metz, Mo., near the western border, when her home was demolished by the storm. Another was reported injured. At Richards nearby 15 freight cars were flattened, a stretch of railroad track torn away and the Missouri Pacific station razed by the fury of the gale.

All communication with the windswept area was interrupted and railroad service was suspended.

Connie Mack Tells How A's Won Second Successive Flag to Prove Class

BY CONNIE MACK

Manager of World Champion Philadelphia Athletics

When the Athletics moved to the training camp at Fort Myers, Fla., last spring, I always considered that I had a team that was on trial.

They had won the American League pennant most impressively in 1929, to be sure, and followed that achievement with a victory over the Cubs in the most dramatic and heart tingling series seen in years.

Yet in my mind, a team had to do it at least two straight pennants to stand out. A team that wins its flag one year and loses it the next never can rate as one of the powerful machines of baseball.

Real baseball machines don't wear out in one season, and my Athletics had to prove to me that they were an exceptional ball club by winning again this year. Had they lost the pennant they would be open to the charge that they were lucky and received more than their share of the breaks during the 1929 season.

"They were just a flash and got away with it," baseball men would say, "because they had the breaks. They didn't get those breaks this year and they sank to their true level."

The Athletics proved they were not petty squibs by winning again this year by an ample margin.

Players who can win the high honors two straight years have proved their right to recognition. They are better than just good players. Mine have proved it beyond any doubt. While the first half of the current season was disappointing to me because Athletic players did not hit the high standard of play of the season before, I think now I was expecting too much, for they were close to the lead, if not actually in the lead, at the half-way mark of the race.

It was on the second invasion of the West, with our first stop in St. Louis, that our players started their drive for the pennant, and with a shower of base blows they demolished the opposition day after day and took the lead to hold it for the remainder of the season.

What made our team successful was the fact that they were equal to important games and vital series that we had to win to maintain our lead. We must not overlook the fact that perhaps no pitcher has performed better for his club than Robert Moses Grove, our left-hander, has this year.

He worked out of turn constantly. When somebody else was pitching and the game became close, the left-hander, without being asked, would walk to the bull pen and start limbering his arm. He saved many games for others by his willingness and capacity for hard work after little rest between his games.

With George Earnshaw, another Iron Man, his right-hand running mate, also working out of turn, we had two wonderful performers who kept Washington from overtaking us.

They were an ideal pair when it came to winning ball games at a critical time in the race.

SPORT COMMENT
by JAMES J. LONG

Jones Faces Added Jinx. • Golf Loser Stands Out.
Return of Cobb Likely. Grimes to Open Series.
Dreyfuss Delays Move. Doctors Work on Bues.

ONE MEDALIST WINS IN ELEVEN YEARS

IF BOBBY JONES, opposed by Jess Sweetser, another former champion, in the semi-finals today, goes through and wins the United States amateur golf title in the final at Merion tomorrow, he will have conquered another hoodoo in addition to the double one he faces in the fact that this is his thirteenth national amateur tourney and he is aiming for his thirteenth major title. The added jinx loomed up in his path when he won the medal honors of the tournament by turning in low score of 142 for the two qualifying rounds on Monday and Tuesday.

Jess Sweetser

Golf has come to consider the winning of the medal distinction in the national amateur as an omen of ill luck. In support of this superstitious belief they point to the fact that in the last 11 years, or ever since the tourney was resumed after a two-year shut-down on account of the World War, there has been only one instance in which the medalist succeeded in marching through to the championship. It was Jones himself who proved the lone exception, Bobby having continued on to the title in 1927 after leading the qualifiers at Minikahda with the same score he made this year.

IT IS TRUE that Dave Herron captured the championship at Oakmont in 1919 after finishing up front among the qualifiers, but he was not the sole holder of the medal honors as Tewkesbury and Manion tied with him at 158. In 1920 Jones and Wright tied for the medal glory at the Engineers with 154 but Chick Evans took the title. In 1921 Francis Ouimet was medalist at St. Louis with 144, but the crown went to Jesse Guilford. In 1922 at Brookline Guilford was first among the qualifiers with 144, but the finish found Sweetser on the throne. In that tournament, by the way, Sweetser, at this year, met Jones in the semi-finals, defeating Bobby and going on to the championship.

In 1923, Jones and Evans shared the best medal score of 149 at Flossmoor, but Max Marston was the tourney winner. In 1923, Corkran was the leading qualifier at Merion with 142, but the championship went to Jones. In 1925, Mackenzie was medalist at Oakmont with 145, only to see Jones win out again. In 1926, Jones led at Baltusrol with 143, but the crown went to George Von Elm. Following the 1927 exception noted above, Voigt was low with 143 at Brae Burn in 1928, but Jones was champion at the finish, and last year, Jones and Homans tied in medal play at Pebble Beach with 145, only to lose out to Jimmy Johnston.

THE TIP IS out that Ty Cobb will be back in baseball next year. The Georgian is said to have been leaning toward the diamond sport again for some time, and according to latest reports the way is now practically paved for his return.

Just where Cobb will land has not been definitely settled, it is said, but the guess of many baseball men is that Ty will become part owner or manager, possibly both, of the Boston American League club.

Ty Cobb

JAMES (RED) MASON, local baseball pilot, never got a peek at Primo Carnera until the Jack Gross bout recently in Chicago, and he writes from that city to pass judgment on the big Italian in his usual guarded and conservative style: "Well, I certainly was surprised to see what a big, over-rated ham this Carnera is. If ever a fighter got a roasting after he started to work, Carnera certainly got the worst panning I ever heard any fighter receive. He is muscle-bound, cannot hit much harder than an ordinary lightweight, and any kind of punch in the stomach makes him wince. If the fight fans merely wanted to get a look at a big curiosity they could do just as well waiting until a side show came to town. I well remember Ed Dunkhorst, known as the human freight car, who was almost as big as Carnera but a 100 per cent better fighter. Well, Bob Fitzsimmons, one of the lightest heavyweights the ring ever knew, fought him one night at the Hercules Club in Brooklyn, and when Fits hit him they could feel the shock of the fall over on Broadway. Then you will recall Herr Plache, the Holland cheese that Kid McCoy knocked stiff, though McCoy was only a middleweight. Well, those two, Dunkhorst and Plache, were far better fighters than Carnera ever will be. What any of the heavyweights of 20 years ago or more would have done to Primo would have been terrible. Jack Johnson, Sam Langford, or even Harry Greb, would have made such a show of this big false alarm that he would have taken the first boat back home without waiting for an extension at Washington to let the cops pay their money to see him perform on set-ups like Gross." Reading between the lines, one gets the faint impression that Mason harbors some slight doubt about Carnera's fistic ability in one or two minor details.

NO DEFINITE INFORMATION as to what the Pittsburgh baseball club is going to do about manager for next year will be forthcoming until the present season is ended, or possibly until after the world series. President Barney Dreyfuss says. He intimates that he has not yet made up his mind and intends to take a few more days to think things over.

Informed of a report that Joe McCarthy might become manager of the Yankees, President Dreyfuss said he would not be surprised at that. He admitted having received a number of telegrams, particularly from friends in Louisville, urging him to sign McCarthy, who managed the Colonels before going to the Cubs, but whether he would make an offer to McCarthy or somebody else, or keep Jewel Ens in the driver's seat, the Pirate owner said he would not decide until next week or later.

THOUGH DEFEATED BY Jess Sweetser in the quarter finals, Maurice McCarthy, Jr., of New York, has been one of the outstand-

Meanwhile the University of Pittsburgh squad will be resting for its opening battle at the Stadium tomorrow and Carnegie Tech will be entrained for Buffalo, where it swings into action in its inaugural against Buffalo University tomorrow night. Thiel College of Greenville, Pa., opens with Temple at Philadelphia tonight.

The Dukes, beaten 7-6 in their initial skirmish with West Virginia University at Forbes Field last Friday night, should find easier sailing against the Slippery Rock Teachers' College eleven, although that outfit last Saturday turned in the first upset of the season when it defeated Waynesburg 7-0. Waynesburg has been nursing its wounds and reorganizing to be fit to help Pitt knock the lid off the Stadium tomorrow afternoon.

NEW DUKE LINEUP

Coach Elmer Layden of the Dukes will send in an entirely new starting lineup against Slippery Rock tonight. It will be that of his second team with the pony backfield consisting of Sullivan at quarter, Cristina and Chacko at the halves and Pawlina at fullback. This does not mean, however, that the first-stringers will not be used. They will be injected into the battle as soon as feasible. Two former Fifth Avenue High School stars, Mellman at quarterback and Catalo at halfback, are the offensive stars of the Slippery Rock team and are expected to star in the Forbes Field battle. They were responsible for the defeat of Waynesburg. The kickoff tonight will be at 8:45.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: CY YOUNG RETIRED 62 BATTERS IN SUCCESSION—While Young was with the Boston Red Sox in 1904, 63 batters faced him in 21 successive innings, and not one reached first base. While pitching against Washington on April 30 he relieved a pitcher after the second inning and retired 21 batters. Young's next game was against Philadelphia on May 5 when he pitched a perfect game, retiring 27 batters. On May 11 he retired 15 Detroit batsmen in the first five innings. SABA, THE ODDEST ISLAND OF THE INDIES—Saba, a picturesque island of the Lesser Antilles, is in reality little more than a volcanic rock, which rises like a tower 2,800 feet into the air, and surrounds the inhabitable crater of the volcano. The Island belongs to Holland, but its official language is English. THE ACCURACY OF PI CARRIED OUT 25 PLACES—Pi (the ratio of the diameter to the circumference of a circle) when carried to 25 decimal places is so enormous a mathematical figure that its accuracy could be tested on a circle the size of our globe without the possibility of even a microscopical discrepancy. In "My Believe It or Not" book, the formula of Pi is carried to 707 decimal places, which is the longest evolved to date.

BOBBY IS 4 UP ON JESS AFTER 18 HOLES

Bobby's lead to just one hole at the tenth.

JONES FINISHES WELL

Jones putted badly to lose the ninth after landing just off the green with his tee shot. He three-putted the tenth and three-putted the twelfth after being lucky to win on the eleventh, which both played badly.

A birdie 3 on the fifteenth, where he sank a six-footer, started Jones off on another rampage. He narrowly missed birdies on both the seventeenth and eighteenth, but pars were good enough to beat the willing Sweetser. The cards:

HOMANS WEAK ON GREENS

Homans' bad putting cost him four holes, but Seaver, too, failed several times with his putter in a pinch, notably when he missed a two-footer at the fifteenth for what seemed to be a sure birdie 3. The Californian was consistently longer from the tee.

The Jersey boy's putting lapses started early in the day, when he took three putts on the second green.

Beaver scored the only birdie of the round when he sent a niblick pitch six feet from the pin at the eighth and holed the putt for a three.

A partial stymie enabled the Los Angeles youth to win the sixteenth after both had reached the green with second shots over the deep quarry guarding the hole. Two bad tee shots at the short seventeenth and a home hole perfectly played by each resulted in halves at the finishing holes. The cards:

BOBBY SEEKS SWEEP

Jones, who lost this championship last year, but who has won everything else in the meantime, is seeking the title to round out a sequence of victories that so far include the two British championships and the American open. No golfer ever held as many as three titles in the same year, so right at this moment Jones is trying to do more than gild the lily. He is trying to improve on perfection—and not without success.

JOE M'CARTHY QUITS TEAM

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Rogers Hornsby already is on the job as manager of the Chicago Cubs.

The Rajah assumed charge of the National League pennant contenders just in time to direct them to a 4-to-3 victory over Cincinnati yesterday. Joe McCarthy, the deposed leader, resigned after an hour's conference with Owner William Wrigley, Jr., and President William L. Veeck, refusing to finish the season, with four games to go, all with Cincinnati.

Fight Results

At Hickey Park, Millvale—Ted Yarosz defeated Tiger Joe Randall, 10 rounds; Corkney DeLora defeated Jackie Hamilton, eight rounds; Anastasio Varopatis won on technical knockout over Terry Heid, 2 rounds; Mike Butch defeated Lloyd Kane, six rounds.

CARDS MAY COP TODAY

By CHARLES J. DOYLE,

Staff Correspondent.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 26.—That grand and glorious feeling was upon the good people of St. Louis today. And it is all because the populace thinks the beloved Cardinals are ready to cop one of the most fascinating of baseball drives.

The situation which obtains today means that the Redbirds have a double-check opportunity to clinch the National League flag before nightfall. On top of their 9-to-6 victory over the Pirates yesterday they are three full games ahead of the runner-up Cubs, with each contender having three games to play.

The best the Bruins can hope for is a tie. If they lose today, the race is over with the Cards in possession of the glory, even if the Buccos should take the Redbirds

ED POLLOCK SCORER

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Edward Pollock, local sports writer, was chosen by the local chapter of the Baseball Writers' Association of America last night as one of the three official scorers of the world series games. The president of the Baseball Writers' Association has been designated as official, while the chapter in the National League city winning the pennant will choose the other scorer.

SPRINGFIELD WINS

DANVILLE, Ill., Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Springfield Central League champion, last night defeated Danville Three-Eye League champion, to 2 in the 20th game of the series for Class B championship. Lost games Springfield an edge of three games to two.

BARTELL FINED, SUSPENDED

Dick Bartell, regular Pirate shortstop, has been suspended and fined the balance of this season's salary as a result of his alleged row with Barney Dreyfuss, owner of the club. Bartell had an argument with Dreyfuss over the amount of transportation money he was to receive to cover his trip back to his home in California. Dreyfuss said the player was "impertinent."

As a result of the row, Ben Sankey, a young infielder recently recalled from Bridgeport, was at shortstop. Bartell probably will be traded this winter, Dreyfuss intimated.

WASHINGTON HIGH WINS

WASHINGTON, Pa., Sept. 26.—A brilliant individual display of defensive football by Mik Nikolich, Burgettstown High School grid leader, was insufficient to stop the swerving attack of Washington High School's shifty backfield runners here yesterday, and the Blue and Black eleven won, 21 to 0.

The high school football season comes into its own today with most of the teams that did not play their opening games last week swinging into action. The City League does not begin to function until next week, but many of the teams appear in outside games today and tomorrow.

Feature games today include Schenley at Dormont, South at Langley, Peabody at Perry and Allegheny at Fifth Avenue, Bellevue High plays at Scott High, North Braddock, Grove City battles at New Castle and Harding High, of Aliquippa, plays at Charleroi in night games.

Oliver High helps to dedicate the new stadium of Wells High, at Steubenville, O., tomorrow. Westinghouse plays at Greensburg, Carnegie at Wilkinsburg and Clairton at Hurst in other feature battles tomorrow.

MOOSE BATTLES ON TONIGHT

The indoor boxing season in Pittsburgh gets under way tonight when I. D. (Apples) Meyers, of Meyers Bowl fame, makes his debut as the new promoter in the Moose Temple, in Penn avenue, where he recently took over the lease of Francis Flynn, who restored boxing in those quarters two winters ago.

Battling Gizzy, of Donora, and Chet Smallwood, of Akron, O., two of the best crowd-pleasers to appear in this section in recent years, will top off the inaugural show, meeting over the 10-round route. In the eight-round semi-final, Mickey Solomen, of New Castle, boxes Billy Brent. George Chambers, of the East End, and Snowflakes Wright, Negro middleweight, of Rankin, meet in the second bout, and Steve Senich, of Homestead, and Johnny Montebano, of Swissvale, are down for the opener.

The first bout is listed for 8:45 o'clock.

Between Rounds

Other bouts for tonight: Sammy Mandell vs. Tommy Herman, Chicago; Al Mirro vs. Hans Birkie, Hollywood, Cal.; Freddie Edwards vs. Jimmy McGraw, Steubenville, O.; Jimmy Smith vs. Marty Collins and Al Ettore vs. Bob Spalding, Philadelphia, and Bobby Neer vs. Buck Dukes, Brooklyn.

Al Mello, Boston middleweight, is ready to try a comeback in the ring following a long layoff because of a nervous affliction.

Tiny Smith, the English pancake-weight now making his home in Washington, Pa., wants to fight Willie Davies after he becomes acclimated. He says he hears a lot of Davies over in England. A veteran of seven years in the ring, Smith, who is being managed by George Turner, claims to have bested Johnny Mills, Elky Clark, Spider Pladner, Kid Patterson, Teddy Baldwin and Johnny Cuthbert. He is a veteran of the 15-round game.

Sparks Ewalt and Joe Gipar, heavies, will box on the amateur card at the Tuxedo seventh Ward A. C. arena Tuesday night. Mike Sankey and Young Zeno also are billed.

Babe Chilman, of Newark, N. J., is anxious to show Big Negro heavyweight Willie Cuber in Pittsburgh. He will box anyone up to 172 pounds and Cuber claims he has annexed out Marty Goodman, Jack Aberman, Sammy Tucker, Bobby Tuscano and Charley Roberts and scored decision victories over Black Bill, Johnny Vasca, Willie LaMotte, Dave Cloud Bradley, Pinky Silverberg, Frisco Grande, Harry Hill, Eddie Lewis and Joe Scalzo.

MY 50 YEARS IN BASEBALL

By CONNIE MACK, MANAGER OF WORLD CHAMPION PHILADELPHIA ATHLETICS

INSTALLMENT 17.

The 1900 race of the newly christened American League was between Chicago and Milwaukee. Comiskey revived the name of White Stockings as a nickname for his club, this appelation having been discarded by the Chicago Nationals after Pop Anson had left the club.

Connie Mack

Headline writers abridged the name to White Sox and today the nickname White Stockings is seldom, if ever, seen on the sport pages.

Milwaukee had a good team, but Comiskey had better pitchers and I realized that I would have to strengthen my staff if I hoped to win the pennant.

I looked all around for pitchers. This was along in June and about this time I read in the papers where the Pittsburgh club had suspended Rube Waddell, a famous left-hander who had remarkable skill but was harder to handle than a cage of Bengal tigers.

Waddell immediately quit the Pirates and joined a strong independent team in Punxsutawney, Pa., which was outside the pale of organized baseball.

Desperate to strengthen my staff, I made a trip to Pittsburgh and obtained permission from Barney Dreyfuss, the Pirates' owner, to negotiate with Waddell.

I must say now that there never was a character in baseball the equal of Waddell. He was a giant in size, yet well proportioned and could throw a ball faster than any left-hander I ever saw.

GOES AFTER RUBE WADDELL

When he was in condition and right he was unhittable. A master pitcher, he had some serious shortcomings that caused more than one gray hair to sprout in my head.

If Waddell was a colossus in size his brain never grew with the rest of his body. Intellectually he was no bigger than a 10-year-old boy. Carefree and totally irresponsible, he had no more sense of duty or the proprieties than a South African Kaffir.

Discipline meant no more to him than a Babylonian cuneiform. Before the most important series he might take himself off on a fishing trip. No, he was not a prohibitionist.

Nevertheless, I wanted the Rube, erratic and skittish as I knew him to be. I had seen him pitch for Grand Rapids a year or two previous to this and knew what he could do. Yet I never had met him or exchanged a word with him.

That night I put in a long-distance call from Pittsburgh to the's hotel in Punxsutawney, a little village in Pennsylvania. I finally was able to get him to the phone. I started by saying:

"Hello, Rube!"

"Who in hell are you?" was his snappy rejoinder.

I felt that he objected to me calling him Rube, so I tried to atone for it by saying:

"Is that you, Eddie?"

RUBE OBDURATE

This seemed to please him and when I introduced myself he was ready enough to talk. I told him how anxious the fans of Milwaukee were to see him on my team. He demurred and I followed with a long argument. Nothing I could say, however, could prevail on him to join my club.

"There is no money on earth," he explained, "that would make me leave Punxsutawney. They do everything for me here and I wouldn't think of leaving the town."

So I went back to Milwaukee empty-handed, but still determined to get him.

Every day for at least two weeks, I sent Waddell a telegram and followed it up with a letter. I meant to break down his resistance. At the end of that period, I knew I was successful.

The Rube sent me a wire which read:

"Come on and get me."

BREAKFAST WITH WADDELL

I lost no time taking a train for Punxsutawney, arriving there late at night. I was up early in the morning and the Rube came to my hotel and we had breakfast together. At this meal we came to an agreement, but I was determined not to let him out of my sight until we had boarded a train. I knew my Rube. Over the bacon and eggs, Rube told me he had a "few small debts to square" before leaving.

After breakfast, he suggested a walk. He led me through the main stem and did not stop until we reached the last store on this thoroughfare. We went inside and the Rube asked the proprietor how much he owed him. Waddell naively presented the bill to me for payment and I had to "cough up," as they say. Then we marched back toward the hotel.

We must have stopped at a dozen stores on the way back. They were furnishing stores, sporting goods stores, cigar stores, saloons, pressing establishments and the like. The Rube's list of creditors were as numerous as flies in summer. In each instance, the formula was the same. The Rube asked for his bill and I paid.

PAYS PAWNBROKER

The real surprise came when he led me to the Adams Express Company building. It seems that Rube had a hunting dog shipped in C. O. D. The express charge was seven or eight dollars, so I had to make good for Waddell's hound, too.

By this time I was getting short of funds, and so notified the Rube that I just had about enough money to get us back to Milwaukee. I never had anticipated that I would have to pay all of the Rube's debts to get him out of Punxsutawney.

The Rube viewed all these proceedings with his usual ox-like expression, as if it were an everyday occurrence in a ball player's life.

"Oh, it's all right," Rube reassured me, "there's just one more place to go."

That proved to be a pawnbroker's and Rube's watch was back in his pocket after I had handed over $12 to the man in charge.

YAROSZ BEATS RANDALL

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

Shunted into the main bout from the semi-final on 24 hours' notice, young Teddy Yarosz, of Monaca, accounted for one of the real upsets of the outdoor boxing season here when he handed Tiger Joe Randall, hard-hitting Negro welterweight veteran of Elizabeth, a sweet pasting in the 10-round main bout at Hickey Park, Millvale, last night.

Randall, who knocked out Eddie Kaufman, of Cleveland, at McKeesport two weeks ago, after a layoff since last spring because of a torn Achilles tendon in his right leg, won only two rounds, the second and seventh, in which he forced the issue. The first was even, after Randall's confident opening rush, and all of the others belonged to Yarosz, who was taking the place of Tom Malco, who withdrew because of a bad hand.

TED TRIES FOR KNOCKOUT

Yarosz was too cool and collected and too much of a sharpshooter for Randall and had no trouble outboxing and outslugging the Tiger. Toward the end, he was trying for a knockout with Randall on the run and glad to hear the final bell. At times during the bout Randall limped or moved about flatfooted, and in the fourth round, he went down and rolled over and got up seemingly barely able to stand on his game leg. However, he came back strong, and it was a matter of speculation among the fans as to whether he was really handicapped by his old injury or merely was affecting it.

Yarosz won many friends by his fine exhibition and should be rewarded with better matches here in the future. He scaled 146 pounds and Randall 146¼.

DE LUCA BEATS HERMAN

Cowboy DeLuca, of Lawrenceville, 144½, won handily over Jackie Herman, of Wheeling, 150½, taking the place of Yarosz in the eight-round semi-final, an earnestly-fought bout.

Terry McManus, of Lawrenceville, 109½, a recent amateur, was no match for sturdy Anastasio Vacquerio, of Panama, 111½, in the second bout, which was stopped after 35 seconds of the second round, after McManus had taken a count of nine and then was floored again, got up at the count of two, and then dropped without being hit as he saw his opponent advancing for the kill. McManus also took a beating in the first round and never had a chance.

Young Nanci, of Swissvale, rallied gamely from knockdowns in every round up to the sixth and fought Mose Butch, of Oakland, off his feet in that session, but the decision for the opening bout, of course, went to Butch. Butch weighed 122¼ and Nanci 124¼.

CLUB TO MOVE INDOORS

The crowd was only fair in size, and it was announced that next week's show will be the last at the park, the club moving indoors. Al Grayber and Joe Keally split the refereeing, with Frank (Bull) Brown back as a judge, working with L. K. Meininger. Steve Russell and Max Zeugschmidt did the timing, and Harry Klaas the announcing. Incidentally, Klaas' expression of the appreciation of the promoters for the fans' patronage was one of the finest bits of open-air announcing ever done in these parts and drew much favorable comment from the crowd.

AMATEURS FETED

More than 200 attended the banquet of the Crafton-Ingram Church League at the Chartiers Heights Country Club last night to Pitcairn, league champion, was presented its trophy.

GRIMES HERO

A scrappy Pirate pitcher of last season, who was sold Lito slavery at Boston and a sunny-dispositioned first-sacker, who the Cardinals were trying to sell down the river only a few weeks ago, today stand out as civic heroes in St. Louis. Burleigh Grimes and Jim Bottomley collaborated yesterday to bring victory to the St. Louis banner. Grimes dowsed his former buddies in whitewash through nine rounds and Sunny Jim made enough runs with his first-inning homer to decide the issue, in view of Burleigh's air-tight pitching. Burleigh allowed only seven hits and was not in danger at any time.

Remy Kremer, owner of 20 victories this season, lasted less than two innings against the hustling Redbirds. Kremer, among other things, as nicked by Sunny Jim for a homer with two Cardinals on the sacks, the wallop coming in the first inning. Bottomley drove the rocket over the right-field stands. The inning produced four tallies.

Glenn Spencer went to the rescue of Remy in the second round. Spencer worked in a fine stride through the remaining chapters, but Glenn was merely getting experience and a work out, so eleven as the performance of the spitball veteran.

Litz, Arnold Sign For Special Race

ALTOONA, Pa., Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Contracts to meet Deacon Litz, of Dubois, Pa., in a special match race at the Altoona Speedway were signed by Billy Arnold, national automobile racing champion, at Chicago yesterday, according to Paul C. Pommer, manager of the speedway. Arnold said he would select a date for the race today.

Litz challenged Arnold for a special race after claiming he received unfair treatment in the Labor Day race here. The race was stopped because of rain while Litz was trailing Arnold by one lap.

ALLEGHENY COLLEGE GRID OUTLOOK ROSY

CRUM TO HAVE NINE VETS ON LINEUP

By JESS CARVER
Staff Correspondent

MEADVILLE, Pa., Sept. 26.—On one of the very best tablecloths in the Lafayette Hotel dining room Coach Harry (Maude) Crum, head grid mentor here at Allegheny, outlined his prospects for the coming season for this correspondent. If the opposition gets the going-over that tablecloth did, Allegheny will have a very fine season indeed.

Allegheny does seem headed for a much more successful campaign than attended the efforts of the Methodists last fall. There were extenuating circumstances in connection with last year's campaign that must be taken into serious consideration when analyzing the situation. Considering all he had to put up with in the way of a tough schedule, a new squad and some unfortunate internal gratings, Coach Harry didn't do so badly with his club last year.

NINE LETTERMEN

This year's Allegheny team is being constructed around a nucleus composed of nine lettermen. The backfield is bound to be a pip, even though Walter Berger, Homestead youth, will be out of action during the early part of the campaign, nursing a twisted side. The invaluable Boo Garbark, Nick Verano and Dennison will fill three of the four positions. The fourth is open, but in Anderson, a hefty freshman, who appears to be the best kicker on the squad, Coach Crum seems to have a fit peg for the hole.

Crum lost three ends, Shorty Martin and McKay, two tackles, School and Shoaf, to a guard, Gibson, and Gamble and Slaughter, backs, from last year's eleven. The loss of a pair of ends of the ability and class of Shorty and McKay was a tough blow, but it has been alleviated somewhat by the reappearance on the squad after a year's layoff of Bohlan, a fine wingman, and the promising pre-season showings of Brown, a letterman, Horn, Goodrich and Fallon, holdovers, and Tuttle, a freshman.

The former Princeton star and George Washington University coach, his same Crum, is going to do a lot of experimenting on his line. He is anxious to develop a forward wall behind which his crack backfield can gallop. To this end, he has been shifting his ends back and forth, and has been doing the same with his guards, tackles and centers.

Allegheny has four outstanding tackle prospects in Pichitino, a letterman; Vanaman, Tinsman and McManus, who may be converted into a tackle from a guard. Pichitino appears to be a fixture at one position, with the other open.

McManus, if he isn't in there at a tackle, will be as a guard, so the opposition may as well get ready for some more tough afternoon trying to handle the rugged Mac. Waite, a letterman Balser drafted from the backfield for the time being, maybe to return. Knapp, Jones, Haymer and Bugby are very anxious to pair off with him. Jones, Haymer and Bugby are centers by rights, but Coach Crum is respecting no position in forming his forward wall.

Morse, a wow of an offensive center, as accurate a snapper-back as will be found in the district, almost is certain to be used at the pivot spot on the offense, but on the defense, figures to be shifted to one of the halfback jobs. He is a deadly tackler, fast as a back (in fact, he played in the backfield during high school days) but cannot backup a line to suit his coach. His speed and experience as a back, Coach Crum figures, will make him a valuable cog on the forward pass defense.

Balser, who returned to school weighing better than 190, after having played in the backfield last year as a 160-pounder, is going to win a job somewhere on the team. If he can be used best on the line, on the line he'll play, otherwise, he'll be in the backfield.

GARBARK IS FIXTURE

Capt. Garbark, of course, the equal of any line smasher in the district, a good kicker, accurate passer and a driver from the start to the finish, will do his usual shifting around in the backfield. Big Bob can do pretty near anything. When they need a tackle taken care of, Bob shifts his position to handle him. When they want the line hammered back, he goes and hammers it. When they want to slice off tackle, Bob gets the call. Not only a gem as a ball toter, he is of first rank as an interfering back.

Verano, a good pass receiver and ball carrier, and Dennison, a shifty runner and dependable safety man, will team up with Garbark as backfield regulars. Anderson, who gained in experience, but who already has shown splendid promise as a punter, Balser, apparently in line for a man-of-all work job, Smith, a speedy little halfback, Engerman, Robblee and Koehler are after the fourth place in the backfield, at least until Berger is in shape for heavy duty.

Coach Harry is a firm believer in the six-man line, which means that he stands in proper awe of the enemies' forward pass attack. It is not likely that he will change his defensive tactics this year, unless it should develop that his line falls short of expectations. If the line comes through at all, the attack will cause foe coaches no little worry.

Allegheny has a well balanced schedule, with only one game with

The mentors, while they are not bragging, realizing that there is many a slip between the cup and the lip and the 10-yard line and the goal are dangerously confident, so confident in fact, that were I coaching a team booked to play Allegheny, I'd spend a lot of time thinking about that game.

Cincinnati with a 5-to-3 victory over Dayton, O., completed the sixth round without a defeat, while Flint disposed of Pittsburgh Verona Community, 4 to 3. Two defeats were necessary to eliminate a team.

ing figures of this year's national amateur championship golf tournament. First he made a hole-in-one next he went an extra hole to qualify in a play-off then he played an extra hole to defeat Watts Gunn, of Pittsburgh, in the second round, and to top it off he broke all records by playing 10 extra holes to beat George Von Elm in the third round.

The hole-in-one habit appears to run in McCarthy's family. A younger brother, Buddy, did it only a few weeks ago, and Gene McCarthy, an uncle, turned the trick twice on the second occasion bouncing his tee shot off a tree into a hole.

BUFFALO IS ONE place where football optimism is not so strong in September that the home team is expected to accomplish wonderful things. Instead, even Coach Lee predicted in a radio talk that the University of Buffalo would lose to Carnegie Tech by a score of 60 to 0 in the opening game tomorrow, and Bison City critics also are forecasting an overwhelming defeat. "To tell the exact and literal truth, the boys running through the plays are probably not as good as the Tartan second-string squad," says one writer in the Buffalo Courier-Express. "The University of Buffalo is overmatched. The object of matching Buffalo against Carnegie Tech this week and against Fordham next week escapes the ordinary fan. The Buffalo team's record of 1929 does not point out that the Bulls are yet in a class to tackle teams of the caliber of those they are facing this year."

JUDGING FROM THE order in which Gabby Street is working his pitchers and the form shown by Burleigh Grimes in shutting out his old mates to open the final series of the season in St. Louis, Grimes will go to the hill for the Cardinals against the A's in the first title battle at Philadelphia next Wednesday. The Redbirds are as good as in for the National League flag. One more victory for them or one defeat for the Cubs will clinch it. As matters stand now Chicago could get no better than a tie.

The selection of Grimes as the starting pitcher for the Redbirds will be all the more probable if Connie Mack, as expected, sends Bob Grove, a left-hander, to the mound. Street may shift to Hallahan if Mack uses a right-hander. Grimes has won 13 games and lost five since joining the Cards. He has lost only one of his last five, two of his last nine, and three of his last 12 games.

A TEMPORARY BLEACHER at Sportsmans Park in St. Louis will increase the capacity of the plant to almost 40,000 for the Cards' home games in the world series.

This will exceed the capacity of Shibe Park in Philadelphia by 10,000 as at each of the Mackmen's home games in last year's series only 29,991 could be crowded into the grounds.

Charley Wood

IT WON'T BE due to any lack of surgical or medical attention if the Pirates are not in shape to get a flying start in next year's pennant race. Following a similar operation performed upon Pitcher Andy Bednar recently, Charley Wood, young southpaw of rare promise, will come back to Pittsburgh from St. Louis next week to have his tonsils removed before proceeding to his home in South Carolina for the winter. One or two other Bucs are to be separated from their tonsils later. Baltimore specialists who asked Lloyd Waner and Pie Traynor to report back recently for new examinations found the condition of both players greatly improved and expressed the opinion they would be as good as new by next spring. The younger Waner was advised to spend as much of the winter as possible outdoors for the purpose of building himself up for the 1931 season.

CAMBRIDGE SPRINGS, Sept. 26.—Visions of an all-Pittsburgh final in the fourteenth annual Northwestern Pennsylvania championship at the Riverside Golf Club here today were shattered yesterday with the elimination of James Lappan, of the Pittsburgh Field Club, by B. F. Kraffert, Jr., of the Titusville Country Club, in the second round of match play, and, as a result, the two Pittsburghers left in the tournament will battle it out between themselves this morning to determine which shall enter the final this afternoon.

In the lower bracket are George McClure, of the Chartiers Heights Country Club, defending champion, and Sam Parks, Jr., of the Highland Country Club. In the upper half, B. F. Kraffert, Jr., of the Titusville Country Club, and Guy McCall, Buffalo, will clash in the semi-finals.

McClure's feat in shooting the first nine holes in 33 strokes, one under par, to eliminate E. H. Silliman, of Jamestown, N. Y., yesterday afternoon, greatly enhanced the Chartiers member's chances of repeating his victory of last year.

The first outstanding upset of the tournament was furnished by McCall in eliminating Arthur (Ducky) Yates, seasoned tournament player, in the second round.

DUKES BATTLE SLIPPERY ROCK TONIGHT

and a good-sized crowd is expected if the weather is favorable.

PITT LINEUP SET

With the first game but a few hours away, Coach Jock Sutherland, of Pitt, finds himself practically decided upon his opening lineup.

TECH LINEUP

Carnegie Tech last evening concluded its training grind for the opener with Buffalo with a light signal drill. At the conclusion of the drill Coaches Steffen and Waddell announced the lineup for the opener with Buffalo tomorrow as follows:

Capt. John Dreshar and Bill Sample, guards; Alex Ducanis, center; John Highberger and Don Fletcher, tackles; Ted Rosenzweig and Latham Flanagan, ends; Harry McCurdy, quarterback; Howard Eyth and George Kavel, halfbacks, and John Kareis, fullback.

The party will leave at 6 p. m. This will enable the players to get a night's rest and a limbering-up before the encounter with the Bisons. Graduate Manager Overend, Coaches Steffen and Waddell, Trainer Munhall, a corps of managers and 35 players will make up a party of 60.

GRID RULES Interpretations

PLAY NO. 23

Yale kicks off to the Army and the ball rolls into the Army's end zone, although touched in the field of play by one of the Army players. No added impetus was given the ball before it crossed the goal line, however. An Army player picks up the ball, but is tackled behind his own goal line by a Yale player and Yale claims two points for a safety.

What is the correct ruling?

ANSWER.

The referee rules that no safety has been made and that it is a touchback which carries no points. The ball is given to the Army to be put into play by scrimmage on its own 20-yard line.

McKees Rocks Range Scene of Big Shoot

Trapshooters of Western Pennsylvania will have their last chance to qualify for the lucrative post-season shoot, to be held at the Wilkinsburg Gun Club, October 9, tomorrow at the McKees Rocks Gun Club, when the last of a series of shoots will be held under the auspices of the Western Pennsylvania Trapshooters' Association.

The post-season shoot will have as its feature attraction Gus Payne, North American clay target champion, who has accepted an invitation to compete.

RUTH LAUDS MACK HURLERS

LEFTY GROVE, EARNSHAW A'SACES

By BABE RUTH,
Baseball's Highest Salaried Player.

Connie Mack is extremely fortunate, I think, in the type of pitching he can call on in the coming world series. He may not have another Ehmke to toss at the Cardinals in the first game and completely disarrange the pitching plans of his rival leader, but he has two top-grade pitchers who can come back fast. That makes them much more valuable for an important series than two pitchers of the same skill but unable to work effectively without the usual rest.

Babe Ruth

Ordinarily a pitcher must have three days rest between his games. That is the way they are trained on their way to the majors, and they follow the three-day rest program as soon as they become starting pitchers. Some require four days' rest.

Grove and Earnshaw are more than two great pitchers who can win consistently when given the usual amount of rest between games. When the figures for this season are compiled you will find Lefty Grove as the most frequently used pitcher of the year, and Earnshaw will rank next in number of appearances on the mound. Ferrell and Lyons may lead them slightly in number of innings pitched, but Grove will take part in at least 50 games, and Earnshaw in almost as many. No National League pitcher is near them in number of appearances and amount of work.

GROVE A WORK HORSE

The reason for this is that either one thinks nothing of pitching a ball game today and going in to save a close one tomorrow. That is why I say Mack is particularly fortunate. It isn't a case of using Grove or Earnshaw one day and figuring him out of it for the next three days. Both thrive on work.

I honestly believe that Mack could start every game in the series with these two pitchers and stand a good chance of having them finish what they start. He could pitch Earnshaw in the opening game on Wednesday, use Grove for the second game, travel out Friday, come back with Earnshaw for the third game and Grove for the fourth. This would bring him to a spot where he would have to use Earnshaw with a two-day rest for the fifth game, but the big fellow could stand that. Then there would be another day of travel after the fifth game, which would provide another day's rest for Grove. I figure Lefty needs a little more than the right-hander.

This is not likely to happen. What I am emphasizing is that these two can pitch without the amount of rest most pitchers demand.

Earnshaw is as strong as a bull. Remember how Mack used him in the second and third game of the 1929 series with his day of rest spent on a train between Chicago and Philadelphia? Less than two weeks ago, he started and pitched good ball for four innings of a game at Cleveland, and the following day he came back to pitch nine innings and beat the Indians, 7-1. In the 1910 series, Connie Mack used Jack Coombs three times in a five-game series, once with one day of rest between games, once with two days of rest.

LIKES RELIEF WORK

Grove is a really great relief pitcher and has grown quite fond of the work. It was a common sight in the American League this season to see Lefty move out toward the bull pen in the late innings of a close game. Frequently he had pitched his own game the day before. If the A's lead was cut down to one run or if they came from behind to gain a one-run lead, you would see Lefty come to the mound. And you also would see some wonderful pitching. I don't know of a pitcher in years who could make a one-run lead stand up as Grove can.

I heard a very interesting story the other day about Grove and relief pitching. You know, a lot of pitchers don't like this kind of work. They are called in just when the other team starts to hit and is likely to slam anybody. At one time Lefty wasn't the easiest fellow to call on. He had to feel just so-so before he wanted to go into the fray.

This year they tell me he has been almost begging to be sent into games which seemed to be slipping. Time and again when Connie's eyes swept the bench as if trying to pick somebody for the work, Lefty would nod to the boss that he was ready. He would come as close to volunteering as would be proper in such circumstances.

OTHERS IN RESERVE

Naturally, this spirit has meant a lot in the success of the A's. Add to great natural ability such willingness to work when the going is toughest and you've got a great pitcher plus.

Don't think I mean that Shores and Quinn and Mahaffey and Walberg and Rommell don't figure. They do, and will. But Grove and Earnshaw are superpitchers.

INDEPENDENT CONFERENCE
Games Sunday

McKeesport Olympics at West View.
McChesneytown at East Pittsburgh

By TOM BIRKS.

Two of the three scheduled independent football conference games for this week will be staged Sunday afternoon. McChesneytown meets East Pittsburgh at the Quarry Grounds, and the McKeesport Olympics hook up with West View at the park. The Burns A. A.-Hope Harvey Majestics game will be staged at Parnassus High School field next Wednesday evening.

It is apparent Barnes and Stanley Berkman are going to be the starting quarterbacks in the West View battle. Freddie Iverson likes the work of the V. M. I. man and Berkman, according to Manager Muzzio, will be calling signals for the Red and White.

The West View starting backfield will be Berkman, Cole, Kenny and Maier, while the Tube City toters to start probably will be Barnes, Toline, Zoltac and Fyock.

The Johnson brothers will be in the McChesneytown backfield, but Joe Wambaugh will hardly start for East Pittsburgh.

On Sunday, at Ambridge, the Mystics meet Pleasant Valley Smilers in the new park.

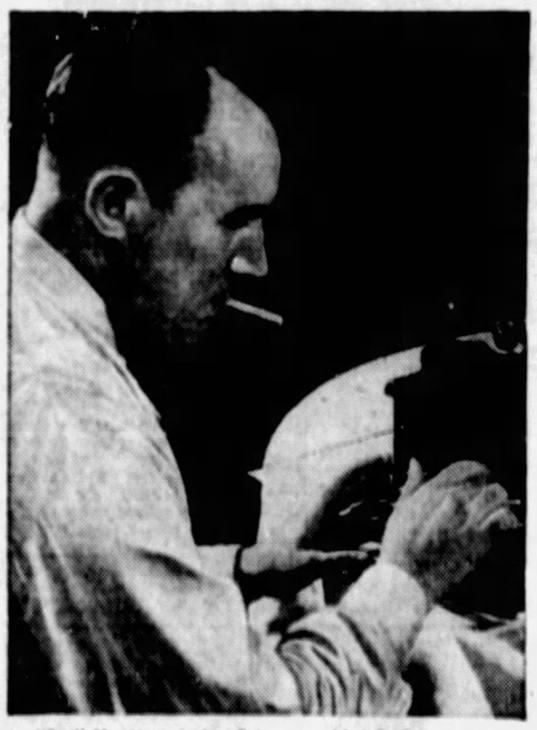
Ripley—CREATOR OF "BELIEVE IT OR NOT"—Proves it



"RIP" HIMSELF ripples off the story of first O. G. conquest.

HERE THEY ARE . . . the "taste testers" at work in the dining room of the New York Athletic Club . . . all of them under the supervision of "Believe It or Not" Ripley himself.

Old Gold most Appealing Cigarette

Completes taste-test of 4 leading cigarettes at New York Athletic Club . . . Believe it or not, OLD GOLD WINS!

By ROBERT RIPLEY, Himself

"'Believe-it-or-nots' have always stopped me. Any story too good to be true pulls me up short. Now comes one of the biggest thrills I've had yet.

"OLD GOLD has always seemed to me to be one of the biggest 'believe-it-or-nots' to be found anywhere.

"That's why I accepted OLD GOLD'S challenge to conduct a series of taste-tests in public places, with the distinct understanding that they would publish the results . . . WIN, LOSE OR DRAW.

"I've just completed the first test at the New York Athletic Club. Fifteen guests at the Club each smoked the four leading brands of cigarettes, with names concealed by metal bands. When each tester had made his choice I took off the bands . . . tabulated the score.

"And, believe it or not, OLD GOLD won!

"'Believe it or not' fans know I prove my facts. So in box at the right is the auditor's report of the score."

Believe it or not . . . Here's proof!

"I hereby certify that the following is a true and complete statement of the results of the taste test conducted by Robert Ripley at the N. Y. A. C.:

MARTINSBURG, W. Va., Sept. 26.—(AP.)—An attempt to carry out the plans for motion picture shows here next Sunday will be made, despite a warning from Mayor Chris H. Dailey that the proposed Sunday shows are prohibited by a city ordinance and that he will enforce the ordinance, the management of a local theater said today.

"NEW KONJOLA IS WONDERFUL" SAYS THIS MAN

Farmer Happy to Praise New and Different Medicine for Good It Did Him.

Results are what count, and Konjola can be counted on for results in ills of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, and for rheumatism, neuritis and nervousness.

MR. S. G. SEALS,

This is easily explained, for all of Konjola's 32 ingredients work together in attacking at their very source the ills Konjola is designed to relieve. See what this amazing medicine did for Mr. S. G. Seals, South View, near Pittsburgh. Then talk it over with the Konjola Man at the Dow drug store, Penn avenue and Sixth street, Pittsburgh, Pa. But right now read the words of Mr. Seals, who said to the Konjola Man:

"I suffered for three or four years from stomach, liver and kidney weakness. Constipation bothered me; I had sharp pains across the back and frequent bladder action disturbed my sleep. I bloated after meals, became short of breath and was nauseated. Bilious attacks and headaches were frequent, because of a torpid liver. But since I have taken Konjola I have an excellent appetite and am gaining in weight and energy. The pains are better and I do not have to get up at night. My liver is functioning correctly, and headaches and bilious attacks are no more. Konjola is wonderful; my faith in it has no limit."

So it goes; the same splendid story of relief when Konjola is put to the test.

The Konjola Man is at the Dow drug store, Penn avenue and Sixth street, Pittsburgh, Pa., where daily he is telling the story of this remarkable medicine. Konjola is sold also in all Dow stores in Pittsburgh and vicinity.

Portrait of a Man Talking to Himself

Here it is 8 in the morning and I gotta talk to myself yet. . . . Talk to myself for a column-load. . . . That means 3½ pages of double-spaced drivel. . . . Readable drivel, however. . . . So that they won't say "Isn't he dull today?" . . . They oughta make those miniature golf things close by 4 at least. . . . If you sit in a night club till dawn you get paragraphs, perhaps. . . . You can't get paragraphs playing tin golf for coin. . . . Wonder who that doll was soloing it? . . . I mean the one with the run in her stocking. . . .

Wonder who the guy is she Goes For? . . . Too pretty to be loose like that. . . . Maybe she hasn't a guy. . . . Maybe she had a guy and he found someone nicer. . . . Maybe she soured on him. . . . Wonder what makes people sour who Once Cared That Way for a long time how can people forget? . . . Or don't they? . . . Why don't they? . . . Why do they? . . . They do though. . . . How can a guy air a gal like Evelyn Laye for a gal like Jessie Matthews? . . . If I get to sleep by noon and I get up by 8 that'd give me time to make the premiere of "Once in a Lifetime." . . . If I get to sleep by noon, that is. . . . Wonder if people really sleep eight hours?

"You mean to say," she said to me, "that you get all your stuff hanging out in night clubs?" . . . She couldn't understand that. . . . She couldn't understand that in night clubs you get drama, comedy, tragedy and farce every ten minutes. . . . Or is it every other minute? . . . Who was it that said most of us hang out in night clubs waiting for consumption to catch up to us? . . . If so, how about the night club doorman who opened cabs in front of hot-spots for 20 years—getting all that fresh air—who died the other day from it? . . . Drama, comedy, tragedy and farce.

Elaine with a spotless rep gets jammed up with Crater. . . . Over what? . . . The rags feature her picture on every front page. . . . She'll have a tough time living it down—that Drama. . . . The 17-year-old kid who parades in the nude for $40 per. . . . Her mother who stands by and gives chilled stares at ringsiders who ogle her daughter—that's Comedy. . . . The gal whose charms have faded and who was fired out of the ensemble in a third-rate dive because her body was merely so-so, and on the same night was pigeon-holed by The Only One That Mattered—that's Tragedy. . . . The gent—on the Crater type—cooing with the blonde cutie in the show. . . . And slipping her heavy sugar, which she slips to her "heart"—Farce!

Gotta help make the game popular. . . . Plenty of laughs in it. . . . They won bets on it last night. . . . Betcha you can't eat five biscuits, without water, in four minutes. . . . You start choking on the third. . . . Wonder how Sime got those letters he publishes in Variety on page 51? . . . I thought I'd die. . . . Ten years ago! . . . Gee, it can't be 10 years ago. . . . Why it was only last week! . . . Howard Langford! . . . My ideal then. . . . What class! His glib gabbing. . . . His nimble hoofing. . . . I wanted to be like Howard Langford. . . . He played the biggies. . . . Wonder if Langford ever played the smallies? . . . He would have been in musicals today if he had lived. . . . Why do people fold up so young? . . .

Poor Donna. . . . If any gal on the Canyon has had the same series of fouls, I've never met her. . . . Everything happens to Donna. . . . Last year with 150 Gs. . . . Not a sou today. . . . "Why get sentimental about it," she said, "it was such fun when I had it!" . . . How they took Donna! . . . She was 16 when the Broadway bulbs blinded her and she's been a sucker for a fast-talker ever since.

"How come you didn't ask your pals and friends to give you a break when you were so ill?" I asked Donna. . . . "Oh, I couldn't," she said. "I couldn't do that. My pride!"

Donna staked hundreds with hundreds last year this time. . . . The newest acquaintances phoned her as often as three times daily when she was in the hosp after an appen op. . . . Her friends (you spell it aitch-double e-e-ll-ess) called and said: "When you get better give me a ring."

Better cut that clowning with Mark about pediculous proofreading. . . . I am beginning to suspect he's purposely misspelling words to get some publicity—the syndication being what it is. . . . The mob says it may be fun for us, but it makes the proofroom look silly, and probably cost somebody a job. . . . And anyway it was only funny when I caught him spelling it "monkies." After that it was a carbon copy. . . . Anyhow, wasn't it Mark Twain who chirped: "I don't care a damn about a man who can spell a word only one way?" . . . And henceforth I'm not gonna alibi ending sentences with prepositions, either. . . . Not if Shakespeare could get away with it in Act III of "Merry Wives of Windsor," like this:

"I have a letter from her of such contents as you will wonder AT". . . And in "Among My Books," didn't James Russell Lowell say of Garfield: "The soil out of which such men as he are made is good to be born on, good to live on, good to die for, and good to be buried IN?"

So from now on look out! . . . "Darn, this typewriter ribbon's worn out!" is better than, "This typewriter ribbon's worn out, darn!"

Maybe I'd be a "god-send" if I passed on the "cure" for hay-fever. . . . Victims can find relief in any modern chin-ema theater which has an air conditioning system. . . . These devices do not merely cool the air in summer. . . . Throughout the year they temper it, provide proper humidity, circulate it, wash it, and make it 96 44-100 pure. . . . In the cleansing process the pollen which arouses the devils in the nasal canal of the hay fever suscipient is removed, along with germs, dirt and feearth. . . . I'll bet I'm not really appreciated. . . . The older they are the funnier they seem. . . . I mean the one about the lunatics. . . . One of them cupped a hand over his other paw and said:

"Guess what I have in my hands". . . . The second dope thought a moment and said, "A battleship!". . . . "Nope," said the first, "you're wrong, guess again". . . . "Lessee, now," said the guesser, "a house?". . . . "Wrong again," said the first gleefully, "Guess once more". . . . "I know!" bellowed the other Hellinger, "a horse!". . . . "That's right!" was the retort Joe Cookish, "but guess what color!!!"

Dammit, here it is twenty to ten. . . . Maybe if I talk to myself fast I can scram by 11. . . . Wish there were shades on this window. . . . My eyes are beginning to hurt. . . . If anything burns me up and knocks me cold it's the radio official who takes his Lindbergh to heart. . . . A few minutes before I start Floyd Gibbing they tell me that they've chopped 55 lines. . . . Mustn't say anything about Lindy! . . . Not a word! . . . And it was merely a tale about a newspaper scoop and in no way offensive to the Colonel. . . . But the fussy ones are strict. . . . "Please do not even mention Lindbergh". . . . Is that so? . . . And why not? . . . Every reporter today is serving Lindy's historians. . . . If it were not for the press and radio (a form of newspaper) they never would have heard of him.

Film Stars of Yesterday Live in Retirement In Many Places

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright 1930, by Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 26.

Film favorites of yesterday are scattered far and wide. A partial check discloses that Marquerite Clark is married to a wealthy merchant, and lives in a suburb of New Orleans; Kathryn MacDonald is married to a millionaire and lives in Montecito; Ella Hall plays extra and bit parts now; Jack Hoxie works in a circus; Beverly Bayne is retired and lives in Long Island; Eva and Jane Novak are retired and both live in the San Fernando Valley.

Further search reveals that Mary MacLaren owns a decorating shop here; Mae Marsh is retired, married and lives in Pasadena; Anna May Wong is appearing on the stage in Vienna; Juanita Mansen is retired and lives in Hollywood; Wanda Hawley is retired and also lives in the film colony; Pearl White is running a casino on the Riviera; Warren Kerrigan is retired and lives in Hollywood on the fortune he made in pictures; John Bowers is in the airplane business; Earle Foxe owns and runs a boys' military academy; Carol Dempster is married to a broker and lives in New York; Jacqueline Logan works in English pictures; Sessue Hawakawa occasionally appears in vaudeville, and Ruth Stonehouse is married to a Hollywood voice teacher and is president of the Children's Home Society.

Pearl White

CATCHING BREATH

A halt has been made in William Powell's picture "New Morals." The situation is diagnosed as story trouble. As soon as re-writing is completed, the cameras grind again.

NEWS OF DOLORES

Dolores Del Rio is better, but is far from well. Doctors say that she must stay in bed for at least three more weeks. She's been seriously ill for a month now. In the meanwhile, United Artists is holding up "The Dove" pending her recovery.

GRETA'S PLANS

It is now determined that Greta Garbo will follow "Inspiration" with "Mata Hari," the story of the most famous woman spy of the World War.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer plans to make a German as well as an English version of the picture.

Barney Glazer's play presumably will be at the base of the story, but several people at the studio have been working on a screen treatment.

PLANS CHANGED

Taylor Holmes will not realize his ambition to direct, after all. R-K-O has bought up his contract, and he is on his way back to New York to appear either in "On the Spot," or in a production for Brock Pemberton. The change of plans was not due to any fault of Mr. Holmes. R-K-O canceled "His Majesty Bunker Bean," in which the stage star was to direct Arthur Lake.

RUSSIAN ACTRESS COMES HERE MONDAY

"Candle Light," which features the Russian actress, Eugenie Leontovich, comes to the Shubert Alvin for a week, commencing Monday night. The story concerns a valet who personates his master on one eventful evening and entertains a lady thrown his way by chance and an erratic telephone.

Adelaide Hall, Bill Robinson's co-star in the new musical comedy, "Brown Bubbles," coming next week to the Nixon, appeared with him in "Blackbirds of 1928," and was recently featured with him in vaudeville.

John Winthrop, character man with the George Sharp Players in the Pitt, spent 22 weeks in the same company with Brown Mehard, in a stock company in Winnipeg, Canada, last season. Miss Mehard, a Sewickley girl, who made her stage debut with the George Sharp Players a few seasons ago, left recently to resume work with the Winnipeg company.

PLAZA OPENING TODAY COMES AFTER GALA PRE-OPENING

By MILDRED FILLMORE

The Plaza Restaurant officially opens its fall season today. Unofficially it opened last night.

The Plaza has Larry Duncan playing the dance music. His orchestra does it in a manner to please. Besides that the floor show has a lot of entertainers. There are a couple of blonde girls, who do a dance; there is an Aparche team that throws each other all over the place; there is a master of ceremonies, who can dance, but who has a big bow tie that gets in the way of his chatter.

Of course, last night's pre-opening was more or less a gala event. Dick Powell was present with his million dollar smile and his singing. Vincent Lopez was there with a solo number at the piano. Both had the house yelling for more.

The political and civic life of the town was represented too. Councilman Harry Little and President of Council John Herron were among those at tables.

New Hiller Revue Show Boat Feature

A new floor revue, produced by Joe Hiller, with dance numbers staged by Lou Bolton, will open tonight on the Show Boat, floating night club at the foot of Sixth street. The revue is titled "Mystic Knights." It will feature Nat Nazarro, Jr., Jack Gwynne magician; Jerry Blanchard in a new program of "blues" songs; Pauline Belesu, personality soubret; Renee and Lora, team of women adagio dancers, and the ensemble, the Ten Tempting Daughters of Eve. Jimmy Carr and his orchestra will continue to furnish the dance music.

CIRCUS IN STANLEY'S CIRCUS PICTURE IS MR. COOK

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

"Rain or Shine" is the new picture in the Stanley. It is all about circus days. And it is a circus! It features that delirious comedian, Joe Cook.

Mr. Cook talks in one streak—but its not "blue." It is just one merry line of nonsense. He talks to the elephant, the lion and the bill collector—and generally he talks them out of something. He has the elephant bowing in shame and the bill collector paying his own bill. As for the lion, it just howls back at him. But so does the audience.

However, Mr. Cook does have some serious moments. Not the hero, in the sense that he gets the girl at the finale, he does the heroic act of saving the heroine from death. And when all the circus performers go on strike, who is it that puts on the whole show? Why, Mr. Cook himself. He's juggler, wire-walker, acrobat and clown.

Ed Lowry, who says showmanship with a smile, is presenting "Dollies Follies" on the stage. As his particular specialties he does the goofy act when he hears the Maine Stein tune and later he vocally waits for ships to come in. The retund Dick Henderson tiptoes through imaginary tulips and spills a line of silly chatter. Norman and Rio take a strap-hanging street car ride and do some keen stepping. Peggy Bernier, personality girl, performs in the usual personality girl manner. She's a captivating little girl, withal. A trio of Spanish dancers is present, also a chorus of dancing girls.

Russia Acting in Desperation; Can't Hurt Us

—By B. C. FORBES—

Mr. Forbes

SINCE RUSSIA proclaims very frankly that her ambition is to overthrow the United States government and all other so-called "capitalistic" governments, the revelation that the Soviet government has hurt wheat prices here by selling "short" millions of bushels on the Chicago market should create little astonishment.

Russia's action supplies one more indication that her condition has become desperate.

WHILE NEWS coming out of Russia is often starkly contradictory, the following would appear to be the facts:

The Soviet government is in dire need of money to pay for imports of tractors, factory equipment and other things necessary for carrying out its grandiose "five-year plan."

Although even the coarsest kind of bread is extremely scarce in many sections, and although practically famine conditions are not uncommon among great numbers of city families, the government needs money so frantically that it is exporting, regardless of the price realized, wheat which is urgently needed to supply the nation with food.

Gross exaggeration is indulged in concerning the quantity of wheat Russia plans to dump on foreign markets. The fact is that Russia has less wheat acreage now than she had before the war, this notwithstanding that her population meanwhile has increased.

No matter how much wheat Russia has sold "short" in this country, she will have to send an equal volume of buying orders, because it would be out of the question for Russia to land wheat in the United States over our virtually unscalable tariff wall.

Therefore, if Russian "short" selling had much to do with sending wheat prices to the lowest levels in many years, her buying-back naturally will send quotations upward.

RUSSIA'S FINANCIAL condition is rapidly going from bad to worse.

Henry D. Baker, formerly American commercial attache in Russia, states:

"Between Oct. 1, 1928, and May 1, 1930, bank note circulation swelled from 989,800,000 rubles, to 1,631,000,000 rubles, while treasury notes rose from 461,400,000 rubles to 1,184,000,000 rubles.

"Until recently, treasury notes were legally issued up to 50 per cent of the bank notes issued, but lately this proportion has been raised to 75 per cent.

"No private concern anywhere in the world can compete with shipments from Russia under this scheme of inflation whereby Soviet labor gets wages now probably no better than the poorest coolies of China. Moreover, the Soviet labor is really a forced serf labor. If it refuses to do its allotted tasks, the food cards are withdrawn and any strikes could mean only starvation.

"Of coure, in time, this inflation of the Russian currency will wipe out its value altogether, just as happened to the German marks."

Mr. Baker explains how, by weird financial juggling and blythe use of the printing press to turn out paper currency, the Soviet government contrives to "make a paper profit of $45.62 a ton on manganese which sold for $12.50." Rubles flow from the printing press "like water from a hydrant," matching the performance of "a magician drawing rabbits from an empty hat."

RAFAEL ABRAMOVICH, of Berlin leader of the Russian Social Democrats, after describing how the Soviet government last year robbed certain districts of even their seed grain and declaring that in their present desperation the Soviets may this year still further jeopardize Russia's ability to produce wheat next year, makes this statement:

"Despite all ballyhoo and statistics, Soviet industry works poorly and expensively. A yard of goods, a pound of nails, a cake of soap, a pair of shoes, and even a scythe, are not only costly, but one has to wait days and weeks before one is able to buy them. As far as costs are concerned, a pair of boots in free trade sells at 100 rubles or $60."

BASIL W. DELCASS, who recently resigned as vice president of the Amtorg Trading Corporation, Russia's purchasing agency in the United States, states:

"In certain regions of Russia famine is already a fact, the Urals, for example. Yet, the Soviet government is quite content to export grain and let the Russian people starve. Claims that things are going well in Russia, that the collectivization of agriculture is a great success, that the five-year plan of industrialization is being realized, are absolutely unfounded."

RUSSIA PALPABLY is acting like a financial and economic madman. A madman sometimes does serious damage, but his antics usually are short-lived.

Don't get over excited about Russia's power to hurt this country.

MANY AGREE WITH BELL POLICY

Change in Business Seen As Company Heads Turn Back to Forward Buying

By MERRYLE RUKEYSER.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—The major current riddle of business is whether it is more prudent to take advantage of current low commodity prices to stock up or to hold off in anticipation of still lower quotations.

Mr. Rukeyser

Having canvassed the policy of leading corporations, I find many executives in agreement with the views of the Bell Telephone group, which announced that because it thought current copper prices were cheap it had placed orders against requirements for four months in advance.

A change in business trend will come when influential business men are convinced that forward buying is more advisable than hand to mouth purchases.

Newcomb Carlton, president of the Western Union Telegraph Company, in response to my inquiry said:

"We are buying copper to cover our needs for the balance of the year. We follow the policy of extending, reconstructing and repairing our plant when materials are cheap and labor is zealous. Materials are certainly cheap—too cheap in some cases—and I sincerely hope for higher prices in the interest of better business."

PLACES RAIL ORDERS

To encourage industry, the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway has recently placed orders for about 60,000 tons of rails, which is now being delivered, but which will not be used until 1931.

Patrick E. Crowley, president of the New York Central Lines, when queried concerning commodity prices, informed me:

"Generally, I feel that present prices for materials and supplies used by the railroads are low, considering the cost of production.

"Some commodities are selling at prices lower than for a number of years, and, with an improvement in business, which we anticipate, the general trend of prices should gradually work higher.

"We are buying our requirements of material and supplies currently as needed, and we expect to continue this policy.

"We do not buy raw materials to any extent, as practically all of our requirements are purchased as a finished product ready for service. Owing to this, we have found it more economical, based on past experience, to arrange our purchases for reasonably prompt delivery only."

THINKS LOW REACHED

The president of one of the largest retail merchandising enterprises in the world, in a message to this column, pointed out:

"I believe, personally, that the great majority of commodities are at bottom prices and that any company placing orders on these levels will make money.

"Our company seldom operates on raw material. We buy the finished product from the manufacturer and do not make commitments for raw material very often. However, we are encouraging manufacturers, with whom we do business, to make their commitments for raw materials, where such raw materials are a large element of the cost of the goods, such as, for instance, cotton duck, denim, etc."

I learn that the management of the Associated Gas and Electric Company, which operates one of the largest inter-connected electric systems in the country, is in agreement with the Bell Telephone group in respect to commodity prices, and is about to place some substantial forward orders.

GRADUAL RECOVERY

In spite of the hysteria resulting from short term swings at the stock market, I find a growing belief among thoughtful executives that business had reached bottom, although some are reluctant to predict how broad the valley at the bottom will prove to be. There is a tendency to defer hopes of a trade boom until 1932, though many believe that there will be a slow and gradual improvement in the meantime.

An outstanding financier, who believes business has reached bottom, nevertheless is advising his friends to buy bonds and to postpone purchases of common stock. He says he will buy stocks when they are selling a reasonable number of times minimum yearly earnings, with some regard to the present financial position and past history of a company. He does not believe that premier industrial companies will get down to old-fashioned bargain price earnings ratios, however.

EVENING SUN-TELEGRAPH MARKETS

Market Uneven — Narrow Declines Here

STOCK MARKET MAKES SOME PROGRESS

Selling of Few Favorites Tends to Keep Trend of List Uneven; Radio Weak

NEW YORK, Sept. 26 (AP).—The stock market made some progress toward recovery today, but the rallies met with little enthusiasm and were generally utilized to take quick and moderate profits.

Selling of a few favorites particularly Radio and Chrysler tended to keep the trend rather uneven. A sharp dip after the opening was followed by an advance above the previous close in which trading became less active, encouraging the shorts to try other lines. They found the support considerably firmer than it was a market activity. Bulls for had been inactive and offerings on the down side became exceedingly meager. It may be that previous suggesting that the bears didn't will hold in this case but more than once in recent months Wall Street has seen another of its performances that which consensus bowed to sell a dull market short pretty thoroughly blasted.

The intense nature of the speculation in Vanadium Steel is evident from the tremendous trading volume in that stock between the opening Wednesday and the end of the third hour of business yesterday. It is seldom that the volume of trading in a given stock reaches a figure closely approaching the total of stock outstanding in such a short period of time. But that is exactly what happened in the case of Vanadium which broke precipitately in Wednesday's trading. In five hours Wednesday a total of approximately 37,600 shares changed hands, equivalent to more than 60 per cent of the aggregate of 378,367 shares outstanding. In the first three hours yesterday an additional 55,000 shares were dealt in, bringing the total for the eight hours to about 287,000 shares, or approximately 80 per cent of the total capital stock outstanding.

The statement by the head of the executive committee of the Association of Railway Executives setting forth the fact that capital expenditures by the railroads in the first half of the year totaling $466,305,000 was $118,000,000 in excess of such outlay in the first half of 1929 does more than merely indicate that the transportation industry kept its pledge of a year ago to President Hoover. It goes far toward explaining while railway net this year has run 33 per cent under last year and while gross revenues have contracted but 12 per cent the carriers following precedent have evidently been charging such expenditures against current earnings until the time for reimbursement through sale of bonds or stocks comes round. It explains the high operating ratio also this year as against last year to date.

As a result of recent movement, the technical position of the market may have been improved. In the first place, considerable short selling has taken place, which normally gives the market a cushion for later reactions. Then, too, considerable of the supply has been liquidated by speculative interests who bought some time ago in anticipation of a substantial improvement in business conditions this fall. With the improvement less than was predicted those speculators were stepping out of their long positions.

Judging by attacks that have been made against the market by the bears they are not inclined to permit the market rally greatly without offering stubborn opposition. Those who have been pessimistic for some time have not changed their views. They continue to talk unsatisfactory business conditions, poor third quarter earnings, unsettlement in commodities and uncertainties abroad as factors which will check any effort on the part of the bulls to re-establish a higher general average for any length of time.

Comment heard in the financial district indicates that the price reduction of 2 cents a gallon made by the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey is not looked upon as encouraging. It was anticipated that some adjustment would be made with the end of the active consuming period approaching, but the cut was larger than looked for. Some fear has been expressed that this action might be followed by a country-wide reduction in prices. That would have an influence on the earnings of the oil companies in the coming months.

Stock Exchange Topics

Upward Market Trend Near Wall Street Opinion

Wall Street has long held to the view that a [illegible] in the opposite direction from the current trend is fatal at hand when the vast majority [illegible] to be [illegible] acting the other way. If precedent is to hold in this instance and if there is nothing to show that it will, it would seem the market is approaching a basis for substantial rally. For Wall Street is almost universally bearish and judged by the sentiment of those who contribute to support considerably firmer than it was a market activity. Bulls for had been inactive and offerings on the down side became exceedingly meager. It may be that previous suggesting that the bears didn't will hold in this case but more than once in recent months Wall Street has seen another of its performances that which consensus bowed to sell a dull market short pretty thoroughly blasted.

Steel Employment 1.9% Less Than 1929

NEW YORK, Sept. 26 (AP).—The average number of workers employed by the United States Steel Corporation during the first half this year stood at 220,591, a decrease of only 4,389 or 1.9 per cent from the average of 224,908 for the entire calendar year of 1929 despite the general business slump.

Commenting on the fact Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the finance committee of the corporation, today said:

"The policy of this corporation, as we have undertaken to develop and define it, and particularly since the recession in business last fall, is equitably to distribute the work as near as may be possible among the workers."

Russia Again Becomes Wheat Exporter

GEORGE H. SNYDER

THE RESTORATION OF RUSSIA to its former position as a wheat exporting country has been one of the principal causes of the weakness in grain prices. This opinion is becoming more prevalent in the grain trade as the evidence of the extent of Russia's shipments accumulates.

Several times in the past few years it was rumored that Russia was about to make the initial steps in reclaiming its former position as one of the largest export producers of wheat. Until this summer, however, these reports never materialized and it developed that the Soviets were still having trouble in meeting their own internal requirements.

But in the past week reports from abroad have been showing conclusively that Russia is back in the wheat business. Apparently changed Soviet policies in dealing with the rural population are having a pronounced effect. The orders placed for farm machinery indicate that plans have been laid for further expansion of agricultural production.

American Growers Affected

SINCE THE WAR Canada and the United States have had the export wheat market to themselves from July until December of each year. Argentina and other Southern Hemisphere wheat producing countries move their crops during the remaining months. Last year was an exception to this due to the maintenance of American prices above the world level as a result of the Federal grain activities in this country and of the wheat pool in Canada. These high prices were also responsible for the accumulation of the large stocks which are still being held on this continent.

The return of Russia brings a new competitor into the business of supplying the world's requirements for wheat during the latter half of the year. The ultimate effect of this change will depend principally on the success of the Soviets in putting farming on a mass production basis.

Ships Chartered

DISPATCHES FROM LONDON state that 200 steamers have been booked this month with the greater part destined to load grain at Black sea ports. This indicates the extent of the Russian wheat movement.

It is the marketing of this grain, together with the influence of the large stocks of wheat held in North America, which has been the principal factor in the break of wheat prices. These sales have been coincident with the movement of actual wheat. It is difficult to see how the short selling operations in this country could have been for any purpose other than hedging since Russia would have been unlikely to deliberately add to a depression in a market for a commodity which it is selling.

Extent of Sales

ESTIMATES HAVE PLACED the Russian shipments of wheat at about one month's supply for the importing countries. While this is not particularly large, the uncertainty about what the country may do has contributed materially to price weakness. The charge of Russian short selling operations have added to the lack of confidence.

The activity of speculators is necessary to provide a market for the selling which takes place in hedging operations. Government regulation of wheat market activities has been responsible for the withdrawal of many large operators from the grain market. Many traders believe that if this interference did not exist wheat would have much better support.

TEST OIL CURB FURTHER

AUSTIN, Tex., Sept. 26.—Further test of legality of crude oil proration in the Mid-Continent field was seen after a temporary restraining order against the Texas Railroad Commission was obtained in District Court by the Danciger Oil Company.

The company said the state wide proration order asserted made in an attempt to regulate production and foster systematic marketing was unconstitutional. Such an order it was asserted deprived the complainants of their property without due process of law.

Under the order the company complained it was forbidden the privilege of supplying its refinery near Pampa, with sufficient crude oil to keep it running at capacity.

Two similar test cases against the Oklahoma regulatory body also have been filed in that state. The Champlin Oil Company has a case pending in Federal District Court. The Julian Oil Company has sought relief from the Oklahoma Supreme Court.

New Construction Volume Increases

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—The volume of new construction undertaken in the 37 states east of the Rocky Mountains during the week ended September 19 maintained the increased rate shown in the preceding week, F. W. Dodge Corporation reports. The total volume of all construction was $86,413,300, which brought the daily rate for September to $13,861,200 compared with a daily rate of $13,892,700 for August and $17,776,100 for September last year. The daily rate of contract letting for residential building alone was $4,114,100 for September, against $3,306,800 for August and $4,695,200 for September last year.

DAILY TRUE STORY

Author!

"Purple leather cover!"

Horace Marlow, owner and editor of the Eureka Magazine, which, for a high-brow publication, flourished amazingly, stared at the manuscript on his desk.

Horace worked alone in a big sunny office. He liked to be alone because he liked to speak his thoughts audibly.

"Tied with violet ribbon!"

Horace almost snorted as he said this.

He flipped back the leather cover and muttered some strong words because it flopped closed again. "An Alley in Utopia."

"What the dickens is an alley in Utopia?" he muttered.

"By Pamelia Palmer."

Horace grinned.

"Wouldn't you know that a person who would tog out a manuscript in purple leather and violet ribbons and call it 'An Alley in Utopia' would have a name like Pamelia Palmer?"

There was a note slipped under the cover. It had evidently had a monogram, but this had been scratched off. Horace read:

"Dear Editor:

"This story is my 'Brain Child.' Deal gently with it, please. It is true to life and my friends who have had the privilege of reading it acclaim it as a little masterpiece. I have a feeling that you will be delighted with it.

"Yours for better literature,

"PAMELIA PALMER."

"It never fails—the dolled-up manuscript isn't worth the paper, while the tattered old script that looks as though it had served as a door mat is usually a find."

Having delivered himself of this observation, spoken solemnly to the green jade Buddha on his desk, Horace started to read with a trained eye and alert mind. He read two pages. He turned to the middle and read two pages. He turned further back and read the last page. Then he reached into a pigeon hole, brought out a printed rejection slip and clipped it to the manuscript. His secretary would do the rest.

Mean Criticism

The story was terrible, the work of an educated person utterly unfitted to write. Horace had an idea. He took a red pencil and wrote across the rejection slip:

"Your Brain Child is suffering from mal-nutrition. The Editor."

"That," he said grimly, "will give Pamelia Palmer a most unhappy quarter hour, but the little fool might as well know now that she should be washing dishes rather than writing, if she aims to be of any use whatever in this more or less irksome mundane sphere of ours."

The author of "An Alley in Utopia" received her cherished manuscript. She found the printed rejection slip in which it was stated that the editor deeply regretted his inability to use the submitted—entitled ——.

The author who signed herself Pamelia Palmer paid little heed to the printed words. Those words in red script written across it were what held her attention.

Two red spots—redder than the pencil Horace had used for writing the unkind criticism, appeared in Pamelia's cheeks. They betoken anger.

"I am going to be an author!" she muttered.

She snatched up the insulting rejection slip and tore it in half. Then she had a change of mind. Pamelia was truly feminine. She carefully pasted the torn pieces together on a card and slipped it into the drawer of her little desk.

She would keep it to look at occasionally. It would get her sore, angry—it would spur her on to better work.

She worked over another story. She called this one "Author." Pamelia Palmer did not garb this manuscript in purple leather. She left a white sheet of paper on top.

The note she sent with it was: Dear Editor: While kind words butter no parsnips, unkind words break no shins. Here is another "Brain Child." I believe it has escaped malnutrition this time. You see I am determined to become an author."

Horace Marlow realized that the note indicated that this Pamelia Palmer had sent him manuscripts previously. He tried to think. What the devil did she mean by reference to a brain-child and mal-nutrition?

Recalls Manuscript

"Ah—the purple-leather covered "Alley in Utopia," Horace exclaimed.

By good rights he should have tossed this one aside, knowing that the author of that "Alley in Utopia" never could write anything acceptable. But curiosity made him read it. It was all about a girl who wanted to become an author and struggled until the great editor, who had turned down her early efforts, had got to the point of sending her letters begging more of her writings.

"No plot, no suspense, no opposition, no problem—no good!" Horace said to himself. He reached for a rejection slip. Then he took the same red pencil. He would try and let her down easy. He wrote along the wide white margin of the printed rejection slip:

"I feel that you are fitted for almost anything other than authorship. And being an author isn't worth the struggle—whether you naturally become an author or you never will. I mean sincerely when I tell you that you will never become an author."

When Pamelia Palmer, as her manuscripts were credited, received this from Horace Marlow, editor of the Eureka Magazine, she shed a few angry tears and then she selected a lavender correspondence card and a scented lavender envelope to match.

She addressed the envelope to Horace Marlow, Esquire, and she wrote in one corner, "Personal."

On the card she wrote in a firm, bold hand:

Horace Marlow, you are an egotistical nonentity. I shall become an author regardless of any smug, insulting remarks you may write from the fastness of your office.

PAMELIA PALMER.

Horace Marlow read the card and was amused.

He couldn't ever remember having been called an egotistical nonentity. He tucked the card away. It was worth saving.

Pamelia Palmer was a name that continued to be signed to many and many a story.

No more of these went to Horace Marlow.

Nevertheless, they came back persistently from wherever they were sent, and the printed rejection slips bore no hand-written comment.

Horace Marlow continued to edit his magazine. His magazine continued to flourish, so much so that when he had three months' numbers all made up in advance he could afford to run away on a vacation.

Reaches Destination

Falmouth was a sleepy village on a wide, sleepy river. Horace refused to look inside of a book or magazine.

Horace drove out to the end of the village to where a storekeeper sent him, and called at the prettiest little cottage he had ever seen—with a yard all gay with crimson phlox, cinnamon roses and tall, scarlet hollyhocks.

Mrs. Mason knew that he was coming. She showed him the front room upstairs and he promptly paid her for a whole month in advance. He drove back and, not being Ritzy, had his trunk put on the trunk rack of his car.

When he got back to Mrs. Mason's her elderly, but husky brother, helped him up with the trunk. Mrs. Mason came up.

"May I come down to dinner in white flannels?" he asked.

"Anything—except dinner clothes; they make me nervous, Mr. Marlow—and I think a man looks like a monkey in them!"

"If you weren't so young, Mrs. Mason, I'd kiss you for those words," he said.

She laughed and blushed like a girl of 60, which she was. Girls of 16, alas, have outgrown the blushing stage.

At dinner Horace Marlow stared at a very young duplicate of Mrs. Mason. She was Miss Margery Mason, a daughter.

Miss Margery Mason, Horace learned, was a school teacher home on vacation. Horace said that he never knew school teachers could be like that.

In the front room were copies of the Eureka Magazine.

"I suppose," Margery said, flicking one of these magazines carelessly with a pink fingernail, "you came away to get rid of all that?"

"I did, and if you won't talk magazines I won't talk schoolroom."

They went swimming and fishing and canoeing on the wide, still Falmouth River.

Horace Marlow, who had written some caustic and widely-quoted essays on the folly of the institution of matrimony, began to think of little else than matrimony, Margery Mason being the party of the second part.

When Horace proposed, confessing that Margery had changed all of his views, Margery smiled at him.

"I hated you terribly once—I even called you an egotistical nonentity."

"You—let me think—" he recalled the lavender correspondence card. "Good lordy, Margery—are you Pamelia Palmer?"

Proposal Accepted

"That's my pen name."

"Have you got into print yet?"

"No, but I am going to be an author in spite of everything."

"Marry me, darling—I'll help you."

"I'm sure you will," she said. He wondered why she blushed so furiously.

They were married in September right there in Mother Mason's front room, and went back to the city. Margery had resigned as a teacher.

A whole year passed.

Margery Mason Marlow was in the front room at home. Horace Marlow received a telegram. It read:

"At last I am an author—it is a son—hurry up here and see my first edition. Margery."

Horace Marlow did hurry up there as fast as he could make it.

He was ushered into the front room. Margery smiled at him.

"Baby was only a couple of hours old when I had that telegram sent to you, Horace," she said, "and since then I've gone ahead—more authorship."

"What do you mean, dearest?" Horace feared the ordeal had unsettled her mind.

"A second edition—" she folded back the coverlet and exposed two infants. "The second edition is a girl. I told you I would be an author."

Horace kissed her.

"Are you going to reject them?"

"Darling," Horace murmured, as well as he could with his lips close to hers.

Census of Unemployed Should Be Taken Here

Mayor Charles H. Kline and the City Council are to be commended for the steps they have taken during the last few days to relieve the unemployment situation in Pittsburgh. The mayor has asked the Department of Public Works to furnish a list of projects that can be taken up at this time, that can be financed through appropriations, and in which unskilled labor can be employed. Sewer and street improvements are particularly contemplated in this connection.

None but workers who can prove that Pittsburgh is their home will be employed. Furthermore, Mayor Kline has asked contractors engaged on city work to hire none but local laborers and has expressed the hope that all Pittsburgh employers will follow the same policy. Pittsburgh has all it can do to provide jobs for its own workers, and must be protected against an influx of "floating labor."

So far, so good. But there are other things that should be done, and one of them is to find out just how many people here are out of work. A census of the unemployed should be taken.

Things are not nearly so bad here as in Detroit, but no one knows precisely how bad it is. Registration of the jobless would throw light on the situation and permit more intelligent handling of it.

In Detroit 500 volunteer workers are registering the unemployed under a plan worked out by Frank Murphy, the new mayor. Yesterday, the first day of registration, brought to the 26 places in Detroit designated for the purpose, 19,407 men and women seeking work, of whom more than 3,000 said their need was desperate, that unless they got jobs at once they would suffer extreme hardship. Many of the registrants requested work for other members of their families. Interpreters helped foreigners in the registration.

This offers a suggestion as to what should be done in Pittsburgh. Let us get the facts as to unemployment at the earliest opportunity.

150 Acres of Timber Burned by Careless Boys

In the current "Service Letter" sent to employes of the Pennsylvania Department of Forests and Waters, District Forester V. M. Bearer of the Forbes State Forest, with headquarters in Ligonier, reports that three boys, between the ages of 12 and 15 years neglected to extinguish a campfire, with the result that a forest fire started which covered 150 acres. The boys were fined $2.35 each by Squire H. G. Tussey of Jeannette and made to promise they would start no more campfires in the forest.

The incident is worth reporting as a reminder to the thousands of Pittsburgh sportsmen, who will soon be taking to the forests on hunting expeditions to be careful not only with their campfires, but also with their matches and smoking materials.

Cigarets and matches carelessly tossed aside are the most frequent cause of forest fires—so much so, in fact, that the Bureau of Standards at Washington proposes that the paper of cigarets shall be chemically treated to keep them from smouldering after being thrown away. Under the plan one-third of the cigaret would not burn after being discarded, while matches also would be treated so that two-thirds of the match stick would not burn. The United States Forest Service estimates that with such precautions the number of forest fires would be materially reduced.

There were 134,895 forest fires in the United States last year; they caused $102,055,400 of damage, and careless smokers were blamed for 21 per cent. of them.

Hunters would do well not to smoke while on the move in the forest. If they confine their use of tobacco to times when they are at rest, they will be less likely to fail to extinguish the cigar or cigaret stub or pipe ashes.

Preparing for City's Largest Convention

William Penn way was closed to traffic between Sixth avenue and Strawberry way yesterday while workmen erected a structure in which a great safety exhibit is to be sheltered. This is just one of many signs that the nineteenth annual Safety Congress is coming.

E. T. Whiter, chairman of the local executive committee that is arranging for the affair, says it will be the largest convention Pittsburgh has ever entertained. Between 6,000 and 8,000 delegates are expected from every part of the United States and Canada.

This is a good time to acknowledge the community's indebtedness to Mr. Whiter's committee and their co-workers for their efforts to make the convention a brilliant success. They have been meeting every week for three months and have done an immense amount of work. There is every assurance that the meeting will be a profitable one, in the sense of promoting the cause for which it is called—the saving of human life and limb.

Accident prevention has been a subject of vital concern for Pittsburgh from the earliest days, since our fundamental industries, coal mining and steel making, have been peculiarly hazardous. With the coming of the automobile, safety has become a matter in which everybody who uses the streets must concern himself. The Safety Congress, which will be in session all next week, will have an important message for all Pittsburghers.

Baird Now Arrayed Against Prohibition

The Pittsburgh executive committee of the Crusaders, militant anti-dry organization, which seeks the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, the Volstead Act and the Snyder Act, is to meet late today to formulate a plan of campaign. The committee is composed for the most part of well-known business and professional men. It is interesting to note in the list the name of Frederick C. Baird.

Frederick C. Baird was United States prohibition administrator for this district for some time prior to the coming of John D. Pennington. If there was ever anybody that was zealous for prohibition, it was Baird. With him the government's battle with the Demon Rum was a tooth-and-nail, catch-as-catch-can affair, with no quarter given or asked. In his zeal Baird went so far as publicly to invite people to spy on their neighbors and report violations of the liquor laws.

It is significant indeed that Baird is now crusading against prohibition.

The World by the Ears -:- -:-

By Nelson Harding

The world grows smaller, so we say,
But how the planet's ears have grown!
And their new hearing powers have been Developed by the microphone.

As further wonders science works
Those listening ears will keener grow
When everybody's tuning in
On programs on the radio.

"Bugs" Baer Says:

Four Speeches

Mr. Hoover's tour of the West will be unique in that he will make only four speeches at stately intervals.

One of these speeches will be off the rear end of the train. Six intervening Pullmans will prevent the engineer from listening to advice from the boys in the back seat.

There will be no reference to politics in the concert tour, retail or wholesale. Now that the farmers have got that heavy loan it will be a goodwill flight.

The interurban clover kickers hollered wolf all summer because it didn't rain. When it did rain they got rheumatism.

The crops slowly harvested beneath the golden sun and the wheat burst into magnificent bread labels. The alfalfa was just the right shape for the parcel post, and the tomatoes all had nice, red complexions like Paul Whiteman. It's funny how vegetables know when the government is on their side.

The barns are bursting with corn and rye. You've got to give three knocks on the barn door to get in.

If it hadn't been for that administration subsidy the farmers would have had their usual bankroll of autumn leaves.

Now everything is as pretty as babies in a parade. So President Hoover's four speeches will be cheered to a white blister. It's easy enough to be happy when everything goes like a song, but the man worth while is the man who can smile when Andy Mellon gets writer's cramp.

We have so much faith in this administration that we won't even read the Ten Commandments because they're not written on White House stationery. It's in pretty good shape, considering it ain't much more than a sparring partner.

Prosperity is just around the corner. But the traffic won't let you make that good left turn.

We're coming around slowly like a yes-man with a stiff neck.

Everything looks as natural as eggs for breakfast. And is as comfortable as a horse collar on a mule.

The Republicans captured the country in 1920, and everybody knows an elephant eats more hay than a donkey. We have run the scale from extravagance to economy, but we will be all right if the next generation takes our oft-repeated advice and saves its bribes.

EVOLUTION OF INTELLIGENCE

By Archibald Henderson

One of the absorbing problems which occupy the attention of contemporary scientists is the question of the development of mind. On all sides are heard boastings of our present civilization, with the inference that we are superior to our ancestors because we have evolved this elaborate social structure. And yet, as President Angell, of Yale, points out: So far as we can judge by the evidence in historic times, there is no reason whatever to suppose that the native intellectual abilities of the average American citizen are in any way superior to those of the Egyptians four thousand years before Christ, or the Homeric Greeks, on to others of the people of that general period in the Mediterranean basin, records of whose civilization have come more or less completely to our knowledge.

It would certainly be a bold protagonist who should assert that modern European civilization has produced, in sheer intellectual power, men superior to Democritus, or Plato, or Aristotle, or Alexander, or Julius Caesar, to say nothing of great Orientals like Confucius.

It is unfortunate for science that records of value concerning the human race exist for such a comparatively brief span. During this period, for which records exist, "there is no convincing evidence of marked development in human intelligence, despite the enormous advances made in the paraphernalia of civilization.

On the other hand, a comparison between the mental qualities of various races now living upon the earth reveals a striking disparity. Furthermore, it is not open to dispute that those which have been living most nearly in a state of nature are far behind the civilized groups, both in average level of intelligence and in the proportionate number of intellects of high order. We are familiar with the plausible theory that existing savage races are our "contemporary ancestors." If this theory be accepted, it can scarcely be doubted that intellect has advanced with civilization. The civilized man, in the technic which he has developed for living, working, thinking, far surpasses the savage or primitive peoples on the average. Yet it must be conceded that individual savages, of innate intellectual capacity, may surpass the mean or average level of civilized society.

If we must trace the development of man from the beginning to this hour, we cannot escape the conclusion that intelligence is essentially a function of the nervous system. As the nervous system evolves in the direction of complexity we may confidently expect a corresponding evolution in intelligence.

The elemental forms of life, such as lower marine organisms, exhibit instinctive reactions only slightly developed, but little if any intelligence. When we come to the frog, for example, we find for the first time the dim, fumbling beginnings of a very low order of intelligence. Later along, among the lower mammalian forms, are exhibited evidences of memory and a growing ability to modify reactions in a beneficial manner.

As we proceed from phase to phase in the rise of species, we discern a real evolutionary process in intelligence. This, of course, rests upon the sound assumption that the more complex organisms have arisen from simpler and historically antecedent forms.

Thus, as Angell says in his The Evolution of Intelligence, civilized man is superior to the primitive man in the power of sustained attention, and though, in the range of things which interest him and in his powers of analysis, abstraction and inference.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Who are the "twelve greatest" American women? The magazine GOOD HOUSEKEEPING, is asking, and it wants YOU to tell.

Interesting stunt, that contest. Better read about it in the current issue. Anyone who wishes is entitled to send in his or her list and a 200-word letter explaining how come. And five eminent American gentlemen will act as judges and distribute five thousand dollars to the writers of the best letters. After which, maybe we'll know who are America's 12 greatest ladies. And maybe we won't! For I am wondering just how one is to rate "greatness" in a woman—?

With men—that's different. Statesmanship—obviously, that's greatness in a male. And you can rattle off a dozen names of outstanding men in that field. But has there ever been a really great states-WOMAN? Women are great manipulators and connivers—that's granted. What they can do in and to a family circle is nobody's business! But can they ever be IMPERSONAL enough to play the game in a bigger way? How many big woman politicians have there ever been in any land? Is there a really big woman politician in America now?

The arts—that's another field where men shine. Men make great artists, great writers, because they can see and depict life as it is. Can women? Doesn't a woman think about life as she wants it to be, rather than as it is? Can women be intellectually honest enough to be great artists?

Or can they be intellectually ruthless enough to be great scientists? Can they sacrifice their prejudice enough to serve the Truth?

Achievement in statecraft, in business, in art and science, that's greatness in a man. Is it, can it be, proof of the greatness of women? And, after all, why should it be? Can a woman serve herself or her nation better than by being just a woman, with all that womanhood may imply?

Is the "greatest woman" in your town some club leader, some sportswoman, some brilliant professional or business executive, or artist or educator or scientist? Or is she just some obscure little old mother whose very first name has been forgotten in the long years of unselfish service as "ma"?

Statesmen guide life . . . is that greater than giving it?

Science preserves life . . . is that greater than creating it?

Art beautifies life . . . is that greater than bearing it?

What can the greatest give their country that can compare to the gift of a man?

"The twelve greatest American women"—you'll have your choice, and I suspect it will be a clever one. And here's hoping you get one of those prizes. But my choice will win no prizes. It will never even be entered. Yet I'm making it now.

The twelve greatest American women—somewhere they toil.

Not over carved desks, not before famous easels, not in congressional conferences.

But in shabby bedrooms, where babies toss in their sleep.

In cluttered kitchens, where men come to be fed.

In school rooms and laundries, in stores and sweatshops.

In hospital wards, where, once more, they go down into the Valley of the Shadow of Death that men may be born.

Alone, obscure, often despised and forgotten—there go America's greatest—

Stand as they pass and salute!

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS.

November Love.

The year grows old,
The wind is cold;
Ah, Love, keep near,
Long, long ago
We did not know
Days could be drear!

With barren bough
Through whirling snow
And shadows deep
Where furred things creep
Still on we go.

The way grows dim,
Earth harsh and grim,
And yet we prove
The spirit's power,
Dear One, by our
November love.

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE

By H. G. WELLS
In Collaboration With
Prof. Julian Huxley and George P. Wells.

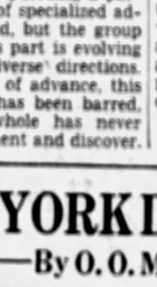
VII.—FAILURES TO VARY AND EXTINCTION.

Advantageous as size would have been to insects in other ways, natural selection could not give it to them, because their plan was fixed in a mold which automatically made size above a certain small limit a handicap to efficiency.

Thus, to sum up, the power of living things to change is definitely restricted through the limitation of variation; one germ-plasm may be much more stable than another, or one type of constitution may readily produce variations in some directions, but be debarred by its own nature from producing them easily or even at all in others.



H. G. Wells

Sometimes it is restricted by the mere fact of previous evolution; for specialization, without necessarily restricting the supply of variations, automatically makes the great majority of them less advantageous.

The specialized animal is committed to a certain line of advance; variations that would take it along other lines can only be useful if it can manage to destroy or modify the plan it has already built up; and even to its advance along its own chosen line a term is eventually set—it reaches the limit of efficiency prescribed by mechanical or chemical laws.

But when all is said, the liberty of change open to evolving life is much more impressive than its restrictions. Here a door is shut, there a limit imposed, but the range of variety and height of attainment is prodigious.

When one kind of creature goes under and becomes extinct, it is often, perhaps usually, because another has varied and more successful ways.

The single type pursuing a particular direction of specialized advance is restricted, but the group of which it forms part is evolving in many and diverse directions. This or that line of advance, this or that change has been barred, but life as a whole has never ceased to experiment and discover.

CHAPTER IX
Is There a Mystical Evolutionary Urge?

1. Straight-line Evolution.

We have treated of mutation as a random, sporadic event happening without design or any appearance of persistent aim. This is how it presents itself to the working biologist.

In the living creatures, fruit flies or maize or whatever they may be, in which he studies variation, new mutant forms of many and varied kinds appear; now one feature of the organism is changed and now another; there is no observable tendency for the germ-plasm to improve itself progressively in a particular direction.

Now at first sight this fact of random variation disagrees with the testimony of the fossils. The palaeontologist, deciphering his vast histories, finds evolution pursuing definite and steady trends.

The horse stock, for example, proceeded onwards through millions of years, always steadily horsewards. At the same time such creatures as camels, rhinoceroses, and pigs for certain, and in all probability the rest of the modern mammals, were slowly and minutely perfecting themselves in their own directions.

And as we have already assured ourselves there are plenty of examples of such steady, progressive evolution among other groups of organisms. Out of these facts has grown the idea of an inward directive force somewhere inside the germplasm that makes it vary always in one direction.

This is the theory of Orthogenesis. On this view the evolution of the horses was due, not to their having taken to the open plains and to any individuals with long legs and complicated grinder teeth having therefore an advantage over the others, but to some innate, independent, orthogentic tendency of horse protoplasm to lengthen its legs and complicate its molars.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Thoughts while strolling. A policeman holding a white-faced pick-pocket, poor devil, for the wagon. Travel posters of Singapore, Bangkok and Batavia—and washed-out city dreamers idling before them, entranced. Bernarr Macfadden. Turn your head quickly and spell that name without looking again.

Cosmetic sign: "Face cream that satinizes!" Tra-la-loo! Pewter ware in style again. John McE. Bowman grows grayer and looks younger. A Seventh avenue cafe that changed names 12 times in a year. The bigger the sign the punker the movie. Wonder what Turkish bath rubbers do on days off?

The Chrysler tower not filling so rapidly. But neither did the Hecksher Building—and look at it now. Bruce Barton somewhat resembles Gene Tunney. Zit's Rolls-Royce. Feather-footed Bill Robinson seems the most popular Negr performer on Broadway. Deservedly.

Neysa McMein, a Quincey, Ill., girl, who made good in the city. Always a cinema celebrity or so in the lobby of the Warwick. And those panting red-tongued puppies in that stuffy Sixth avenue window. What happened to the ginger snap business?

An airplane misses fire, dips, but shoots up again. And gulpity-gulp goes three sticks of chewing gum. If you think a Scottish terrier cannot fight—how are the folks? That that policeman said to a chauffeur! Wonder where William MacHarg, the old recluse, keeps himself? Ursula Parret, the "Ex" authoress.

That new St. Moritz hotel. Ultra-continental and what ho! British riding academy instructors. And shoe repairers in braided uniforms. Men's autumnal hats in lizzie shades. They never thought out in Youngstown, O., Harry Warner would control a big slice of Broadway some day.

New York's creeping sickness—the growing traffic congestion. A postman suggesting Charles Evan Hughes—open face with Airedale trimmings. Wouldn't it be funny to inquire in a chain drug store if they sold barbed wire. And if they did yank out a pistol and shoot yourself. All right, think up one funnier. * * *

A gentleman disappointed over a favorite editorial writer being supplanted by another writes me thus: "A great fire has gone glimmering and a nonentity with a tallow dip is trailing a mental tropical sun." A bird expressing himself so superbly will get a broken arm if he ever reaches for my typewriter.

On a Broadway corner last evening a pitch-man after a breezy talk reached into his grip and offered for a half dollar: A gold pencil, a fountain pen, a cigar lighter, a cigar cutter and 25 cents in change. I hesitated only a second and walked right on. Whence comes such will power, hey, hey!

In gregarious moments I like to drift over to Broadway where shops are still shops and not satiny salons. When I enter salons I have a feeling I am about to step on a cat or that something will go off with a mighty bang right under me.

In one of the salons recently a clerk sporting a lapel gardenia told me a shaving lotion I was about to purchase would "youthify." It somehow made me madder than fury and Mike Hogg wanted to slap him down. Then there is the baking salon—you'll die at this—with colored bread for the kiddies. The wheat is tinted with harmless vegetable dyes and the bread comes out of the oven orange, strawberry, green, pink and lemon yellow.

* * *

A philanthropic new Bowery lodging house is to have a dollar a day room with bath rate and patrons will have the privilege of a book a night from a library of 5,000 books. Many Boweryites are prodigious readers.

Ring Lardner has two homes in New York—a town house and country place. But he works in a hotel room on the noisiest block in midtown with a radio squawking at his side incessantly. But he has furnished so much discord for sour quartettes it doesn't bother him at all.

From Miss S. in Hollywood: "I saw a post card you sent a friend of yours from Munich recently. I expected a bright epigram, but it was just another inane bromide."

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

In driving your automobile, do you take a chance with little more hope that you shall escape injury?

Virtually, with your eyes shut you go ahead and trust to luck.

Some day luck will be against you or you will not be fortunate enough to escape what you deserve as a result of your recklessness or poor judgment.

You may be willing to take risks for the thrills of escape.

But an automobile is a dangerous thing with which to seek thrills.

You have seen drivers do certain things and you want to try it yourself.

Like everything else, the element of personal equation figures to an important extent in doing what appears to be so easy to another person.

Comparatively few can qualify as good automobile drivers.

Many of those who have met with disastrous accidents considered themselves good drivers, while, as a matter of fact, they were poor drivers.

They didn't have what is called "driving sense," or judgment for quick action when it is necessary.

A good driver must have keener sense in emergency and right action to correspond.
